Conference Games Today.
Nebraska vs. Ames at Ames.
Washington vs Drake at Des Moines.
There are but two conference games today, Nebraska and Ames in the first division. Drake and Washington in the second. Kansas University will mix with Oklahoma at Norman. The other games in the Valley are of lesser importance. The game etween the two tailenders will have no bearing on the championship race in the conference for neither team has a look in.

Why this slap on the wrist?
"Press dispatches from the Cornhusker headquarters Sunday, indicated that Purdy, the Nebraska captain, was terribly injured and laid out for the season by a wrenched ligament in his leg, suffered during the game with Haskell. The latest reports, sent out yesterday, say that he is feeling better tonight and the injury is not as severe as was at first thought." Jumbo Stichm should hush those Lincoln papers. If he wants the other Conference teams to think that his star fullback is laid out for the season, he should not be show up in so decisive a manner by his supporters at home." -Daily Kansan.

The string quartet played Carl Schuberth's "My Journey through the Kirgis Steppes" at convocation Thursday. The audience was not as large as might have been expected, but was very attentive and appreciative. It seems too bad that more of the faculty and student body do not realize what splendid programs are being given this year.

The music yesterday revealed the delicate lightness united with the minor plaintiveness so characteristic of Slavonic harmony. An interesting feature was the weaving in of suggestions of Bulgarian folk songs. The difference in temperament makes it harder for us to grasp this music as quickly as our own.
