THE TEAM.

The University delights to do honor to the men who make the name Nebraska held in respect thruout the athletic world. Now without detracting from the praise of the stars of the gridiron, we may well pause to give credit to the men who have been designated to uphold the honor of Nebraska in the intercollegiate de bates

For a month exteen men have worked nightly, at the expense of their studies, in the hope of making the teams. They have pored over volunies innumerable in the libraries. collecting evidence on the question of "Literacy." Bulletins of the government have been stripped of their facts LOST Will man who found leather to make up the background of argument which will be used against Min-braska hall please return to Rag office. nesota and Iowa. Now at this final tryout eight men have been selected as the most fit to represent the University. On December 12 the debates are held, with lowa at lowa ('ity and with Minnesota at Lincoln. In the evidence of confidence in the debaters, and interest in their work. Nebraska's record in the intercollegiate debates on past records alone. The records of the future depend upon the present team, and the interest of the entire University can be a potential force for encouragement.

PROGRESS.

At the first of the semester it was announced that one policy of the Nebraskan would be to become efficient as a gatherer of news. The seminar of last night was a step in this direction. Working without the supervision which a school or instructor of journalism could exert, it is necessary for the staff to take steps towards acquiring an understanding of actual journalistic principles. With a staff of reporters conscientiously following out these principles, the quality of the workmanship produced will be raised.

GOING TO KANSAS?

If so, better make up your mind and act. The Kansans are getting out a crowd of several thousand homecomers for the game, and Nebraska can't afford to miss the fun. The special train is being filled now in the office of Guy Reed.

Nebraska. Usually the K. U. aggregation loaf through the rest of the schedule, but always pointing their team against Nebraska and Missouri.

The Kansas team is reputed to be very strong on the defensive while their offensive work falls short. The opposite of this is true at Nebraska, so the two teams will match their strong points against each other and likewise their weak ones.

As is usually the custom of our southern neighbors they are backing Entered at the postoffice at Lincoln, their team in the way of betting, but Nebraska, as second-class mail matter, odds are being asked. One to two on Kansas is the favorite, but even money that Nebraska won't beat Kansas by more than seven points is also attracting some attention.
