SUCCESS AT LOUP CITY

Dates for Performances.

The Dramatic club scored another success with the play "The Servant in the House," which it produced at Loup City the Friday before the Christmas holidays. The audience was very appreciative and showered much praise upon the cast and its coach in the serious work that they attempted. Much favorable comment for the Dramatic club in its efforts in presenting such a play has appeared in many newspapers throughout the state. The State Journal and the Omaha Bee have both written editorially advocating that the club form a sort of a stock company and produce serious and worthy plays at regular intervals.

There has been several requests from cities out in the state asking that "The Servant in the House" be brought to their theaters. This morning a letter was received from Friend, Neb., asking for the play to be produced there. It has not been fully decided what action the club will take upon these requests.

The Northwestern of Loup City in writing upon the play said in part:

"It was the universal opinion of those who saw it that 'The Servant in the House' was equal if not superior to 'All of a Sudden Peggy,' played at the dedication of the new opera house by the same club a year ago.

"It would be unfair to mention the ability of any one of the actors especially, but the mental and spiritual anguish of the Vicar as depicted by Claude Stewart was undoubtedly a masterly presentation. The comedy parts in this very deep play were presented by Louis Horne as the cockney page boy and R. K. Ammerman, the worldly Vicar of Lancashire, were most welcome. Mr. Sinke as the oriental bishop of Benares presented the calm seer-ship of the oriental. Miss Wilson made a most adorable little girl and Miss Preece represented the worldly self-seeking wife.

COMET FAST IS DISAPPEARING

Heavenly Visitor Keeps Away From
Earth—Invisible with University
Telescope.

The Delevan-Westphal comet, which was visible through large telescopes during the holidays, is now retrograding. It is possible that it may be seen again, however, before it passes entirely beyond telescopic vision. At present it is obscured by the rays of the sun. The comet did not pass very close to the earth compared with Haley's comet and others, and it was not visible at any time through the four-inch telescope of the observatory on the campus. Had it been visible it could have been seen in the southeastern heavens somewhat west of the constellation of Orion.

One hundred and twenty-three tickets, inclusive of all complimentaries, have been validated for the senior hop, January 16, 1914. No more tickets will be validated for this hop. Junior Play Cast Announced.

March 6th. The cast has just been announced and the work will begin at once on the production the committee in charge chose as the one to be presented by the class. "The Man From Home," the play that met the requirements of the committee, is one that is well known to the followers of the stage and its productions. It met with remarkable success when presented before metropolitan audiences, and is the product of the well known playwrights, Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson.

The cast as chosen in the recent tryouts represents the best talent in the junior class, many of the players having appeared before university audiences on previous occasions and have enviable reputations in the dramatic circles of the school. The rehearsals will begin in the near future under the direction of Miss Howell, who needs no introduction as a coach of university dramatics. The cast as chosen includes: Mr. Cloyd Stewart, Don Wood, Fred H. Fielding, Louis Horne, Fred Babcock, J. H. Quinn, J. C. Beard, Leon Snyder, Donald Barnes, F. C. Campbell, Miss Floy Williams, Miss Essie Jones, Miss Ethel Hills, Carl Ganz, R. O. Canaday, L. L. Lynch.
