A STUDENT CONVOCATION.

In announcing the convocation for this morning, it will be noticed that two students are to be on the program. This is the first student convocation which has been on the boards for several years. Students have taken the initiative on several special oc casions, such as freshmen caps and other problems, but for students to take charge of the general convocation is a decided innovation. It is hoped that students generally will realize this, and turn out to give their own "prophets" due honor. The committee on convocation is literally taking ad vantage of the widespread move for student rights, and submits this convocation period for their approval. It is the time for the assertation of student sentiment, which hopes later to manage and control itself.

THAT PROM.

The junior prom is evidently a prob ability. With the announcement of tickets, the committee puts the question up to the students, as to whether there shall be one or two class prome The Nebraskan still believes that it would be economy, safety, and general good policy to hold one combined upper-class-or better yet, all-university prom, than to have two ordinary dances with full dress equipment and better programs. The junior committee pleads that under the debt which the class is under contract to remove. it would be impossible to work a combination. The senior committee has as yet vouchsafed no conclusion. Still, The Nebraskan would like to see the committee get together, or the classes concerned take some action on the matter. The combined prom of last year was a move in the right direction.

HEROES, ALL.

Each man whop lanked across three bones and togged up in his battle regalia (full dress and otherwise) for the military ball may feel a bit of pride. Each man was pleasantly guilty of doing a favor to his country. For the financial report shows that just twenty-five coppers went to the treasury of the Officer's club. And had one man failed to do his duty, shirked aminations at any particular time at from the straight and harrow in ever present, or, in fact, to give any at all.
