HARVARD HAS FIRM FOR WRITING STUDENT'S LETTERS

Young Men Desire to Take Place of "Practical Letter Writer" in Crimson Student's Life.

To those fond parents who fear that our colleges are not abreast of the times and fail to hitch their young men to the practical thought of the age we cite an advertisement in the Harvard "Crimson." It appeals to "sighing lovers" and undutiful sons" in large type and then makes this sensible proposal:

"Letters of all kinds written to order. Requests for checks you have hesitated to ask for—letters pacifying irate fathers—letters of acceptance and regret—letters of apology—bread and butter letters, etc. Any little love affair we can fix up? We succeed where the individual fails."

Surely specialization could not go much further than this. The ability of the young college graduate to write has been declining steadily, it is commonly asserted. And with all the demands made upon his time by the broader subjects open to his election it is easy to understand why this should be. Nor from a business point of view is there any reason why the lost art of writing should be drilled into unwilling youth. When the young graduate gets his job a stenographer will be at his elbow to supply everything except the thoughts and the signature.

Letter writing thus retreats into a position as far removed from everyday needs as miniature painting or chess. Some old-fashioned boys may prefer to write their own love letters. But for the great mass of proudly illiterate collegians the advertiser in the "Crimson" fills a long felt want.—Ex.

More Applications Wanted
For One Of Best Paid
Positions In College

While the number of applicants for the position of circulation manager for The Daily Nebraskan is sufficient to give the new business management plenty of assistance during the coming campaign for an enlarged newspaper, students must not take it for granted that it is too late. It is not the case, those applying this week will receive the same consideration as those who have already sent in their applications.

The position of circulation manager during the coming year will carry with it a salary which will make the position well worth the time and efforts of the student who succeeds in securing the appointment. He will be given plenty of opportunity to make the acquaintance of the various advertising men about the city and should he prove himself capable of handling the advertising and business end of the paper he will receive the commendation for a higher position in his junior or senior year. While a sophomore is preferred, a live freshman will receive the same consideration. Students interested should not fail to see Mr. Williams, care of the Administration building.

EUROPEAN BOTANISTS
REMEMBER NEBRASKA

English Magazine Account of Botanist Trip Through the United States.
Soaks of Uni.

In a recent number of The New Phytologist, a British botanical journal, Prof. A. G. Tansley of Cambridge University begins a series of articles in the International Phytogeographic excursion which was held in America during August and September, 1913. Twelve English and European botanists accompanied by a number of American botanists made the trip from New York across the United States and southward along the Pacific coast and then back eastward by a southern route. The members of the excursion stopped in Lincoln on August 9, and were entertained by the university and the city.

Professor Tansley writes with such appreciation of the entertainment and experiences of the party while in this vicinity. He mentions in particular the part played by Dr. Bessey in the plans for their visit and of the courtesies extended by the Chancellor, the Lincoln Commercial club and the Governor, and of the enjoyment at the university where they inspected the botany department and listened to an illustrated lecture on the plant life of the sandhills by Dr. Pool who was convalescing after his serious illness of last spring.

The writer also includes in this first article numerous comments upon the observations which they made with reference to the native plant life about Lincoln.

HAVE BIG MEN'S BANQUET

a student council represent the entire student body than any group of men chosen by their predecessors. Reed said that he was anxious to see a more powerful student sentiment aroused, which would be more effective in forcing action on the campus. The student council would be a definite means to that end.

Religion and Science Unlike.

Rev. T. M. Shipherd spoke last, on the subject, "Intellectual Faith." Dealing with the problem of the student and his spiritual faith when subjected to the test of the intellectual atmosphere of the university, he said that there was no real conflict between the Bible and science. "To intelligent students," he said, "of the Bible and science, there never was a conflict between the two. They are not parallel. Therefore, the student has a right to admitting he does not know what he does not know—agnosticism, if you please—so long as he uses his new gained intelligence. But do not put university training above other forms of acquired knowledge. Your training is no substitute for insight."

At the close of the speaking it was announced that it was the intention to have a bigger and better banquet next year. The men broke up with "Number One."
