OMNIPOTENCY OF YOUTH (?)

After reading an article in the Masonic Voice Review under the signature of D. Frank Peffley, with the head line, "Word to Young Men," I cannot refrain from asking you to publish the following:

"Remember, son, that the world is older than you are by several years" says a writer in Algeria. "That thousands of years it has been so full of smarter and better young men than yourself that their feet stuck out of the dormer windows; that when they died the Old Globe went wagging on, and not one man in ten million went to the funeral or even heard of the death. Be as smart as you can of course, know as much as you can without blowing the packing out of your cylinder heads; shed the light of your wisdom abroad in the world; but don't imagine a thing is so simple because you say it is. Don't be too sorry for our father because he knows so much less than you do.

"The World has great need of young men but no greater need than the young man have of it. Your clothes fit you better than your father's fit him, they cost more money, they are more stylish. Your mustache is neater, the cut of your hair is better, you are prettier, oh, far prettier than pa.

"But young man the old get gets the biggest salary, and his homely scribbling signature on the business end of a check will drain more money out of the bank in five minutes than you can get out with a ream of paper and a copperplate signature in six months.

"Young men are useful, and they are ornamental, and we all love them, and we couldn't engineer a picnic without them but they are no novelty son. Oh, no, nothing of the kind. They have been there before. Don't be so modest as to shut yourself clear out but don't be so fresh you will have to be put away in the cool to keep from spoiling. Don't be afraid that your merit will not be discovered. People all over the world are hunting for you and if you are worth finding they will find you. A diamond isn't so easily found as the quartz pebble, but people search for it all the more intently.—Broken Bow Republican.

CENSUS OF NEBRASKA FARMS

The state board of agriculture has published in its annual bulletin this year some interesting statistics along the line of farm ownership, the acreage of farms and the acre of cultivated and uncultivated land. This bulletin shows that there are 83,133 farm owners and 68,043 farm tenants. That is, there are more farmers who own their farms, living upon them and operating them, than there are tenants living on leased farms. In almost every county the number of farm owners living on their farms exceed tenants. This bulletin shows that there are incorporated in strictly farms in the state, 30,803,224 acres; of these acres in farms, 14,209,364 are cultivated. According to the same statistics 223,641 acres are under irrigation. These statistics are not complete, but as a general average they show the proportion of lands in farms that are cultivated and uncultivated; the number of acres under irrigation probably exceed those in this statement to a considerable extent. Improvements on lands in the state as estimated by the statistics of the state board of agriculture total $113,503,899.—Trade Review.
