When three years old his parents brought him out to this country locating at Peoria, Ill., where he spent his early childhood. At the tender age of 14 years he offered himself to fight for his beloved country, enlisting in June 1862 in Company K, 77th Illinois Volunteers, carrying a musket in his company until taken prisoner at Mansfield, Louisiana, from where he was taken to Camp Ford at Tyler, Texas and there held prisoner of war for 13 months and 10 days. Returning from the war at its close, he was married to Sarah Fletcher of Trivolia, Ill., on Sept. 28, 1867. To this union were born six children, four sons and two girls. The eldest son, Edward L., preceded his father to the better world, having died on July 27, 1894. Mr. Greenhalgh came to Nebraska with his family in February 1887, locating on the homestead in Scott township, where he resided until his death. He was broken in health when he came here and has been a constant sufferer ever since, but through all his sufferings and sickness, loving hands have ministered to him and helped him over the rougher places in his journey through life, and those same loving hands are helping to lay his mortal remains to rest.

Of course, in order to keep up in the race for new ideas, our schools and all other schools should adopt the newest methods in penmanship, but we believe it would also be a good idea to devote at least a quarter hour each day to the development of the art of writing legibly as described and advocated in the nearly obsolete Spencerian system. In these modern days the idea that a pupil must first know the correct form of a written character ere he can reproduce it seems to have been lost sight of. I wish some of our near graduates of today could see some of the notes little Maggie Stack used to slip across the aisle to me. When she was 11 years old she could furnish a page of copy that would compare favorably with the faultlessly executed legends that adorned the top of our copy book pages.—Clay County Sun.
