Fritz Bichel has been putting in a cement cattle runway across the road just east of his barn. The runway will also act as a culvert for the water that comes down the draw. It is worth ten dollars each year to the carrier to have a good culvert in this place.

Carrier had another ice house blown to pieces last Thursday afternoon in the small cyclone that passed over Loup City. This is the fourth ice house that I have had destroyed, three at the lake and one uptown. I believe that no building could have withstood this little twister. The reason that I believe so is that a big gear wheel weighing 350 pounds was blown off a shaft on which it was keyed. The shaft was three inches in diameter. This wheel was carried a distance of about fifteen feet. To show how solid the wheel is, last winter we took a heavy hammer and tried to move it so it would work better, and only succeeded in moving it about a quarter of an inch. The elevator tower, with the rest of the gearing is still standing, but is somewhat twisted out of shape, only two bolts holding the elevator in an upright position.
