The Value of Thrift

We will all agree that there is too much extravagance and waste; that it is harmful to us as individuals, and as a nation; that we should endeavor to improve this condition.

One of the most effective methods in our judgment, would be to make it a part of the public school curriculum. The children's minds are susceptible to early ideas, their parents would naturally encourage them, and as they grow up to manhood and womanhood both the boys and girls would, at least, have heard and learned something of the principles of economy.

One man says you cannot teach economy, that it is inherited, or finally comes from necessity. We don't agree with that idea.

KILLS HIMSELF BY SHOOTING. Irvin Hohlfeld, a young man twenty-three years of age, living with his parents in the south part of Sherman county committed suicide by shooting himself with a rifle last Friday morning.

Mr. Hohlfeld arose at the usual time and built the kitchen fire, soon after which his sister began to prepare the breakfast. Thinking she heard a shot, she looked out but saw nothing of her brother. Calling to him she heard no response. She spoke to her mother about it and together they went to the barnyard, where they found the boy in a shed with a bullet hole in the center of his forehead. A rifle lying near showed what weapon had been used. No reason is advanced why he should take his own life, and no word could be found that had been left by him.

Coroner Main was called to the Hohlfeld farm, and accompanied by Sheriff Williams, County Attorney Stephens and C. C. Cooper went to the scene of the tragedy. A jury was empaneled and after hearing the evidence in the case brought in a verdict that young Hohlfeld had come to his death by his own hand, as above stated.

Gust Hohlfeld, father of the boy is a prominent and well to do farmer, well liked by his neighbors and popular in the community. The family and other relatives have the full sympathy of the community in the calamity so suddenly brought upon them.

The United States department of agriculture gives notice that shipments containing more than 5 per cent of bad eggs will be regarded as violating the food and drugs act and suggests that country shippers candle eggs intended for interstate commerce. Under the federal food and drugs act, eggs, in common with other articles of food, are adulterated if they consist wholly or in part of a filthy, decomposed, or putrid substance. In the opinion of the department, eggs are adulterated which contain yolks stuck to the shell, black spots, black rots or mixed rots. Mouldy eggs, added eggs, or any other eggs which consist wholly or in part of a filthy, decomposed, or putrid substance come under the same classification.
