The Value of Thrift

"No fear need be had for the immediate future, but it is inevitable that the time is coming when this country will meet the test of financing practically the whole world. Preparations are being made for defense in the event of war; preparations should also be made for peace. This capital can be secured through education; by calling the attention of the people to the lack of thrift in the country, and the beneficial results of practicing economy, and through a systematic nation-wide campaign to promote saving." Save, Save, Save.

A dog license notice has been running in The Northwestern for several weeks by the city clerk, who informs the writer that a good many owners of dogs have taken no heed to the marshal has killed several dogs and has four in the pound at this time. The marshal has orders to kill dogs that have been in the pound for two days, so if you have not paid the small license fee and wish to keep your dog it would be a good idea to see the proper authorities and secure the little tag at once.

Take a look at your neighbor's yard. It may look better than yours. Your neighbor may even be cleaning it up while you are looking, when as a matter of fact you ought to be cleaning up yourself in order to make your yard look better than his. That's the way to make strangers look twice at a town as they pass through.

Do you want to develop your muscles, and stimulate your appetite, and aid your digestion, and put more color in your face, and make yourself feel better all over generally and inside in particular? Thirty minutes exercise a day will do it. Go out into the garden. Use a hoe, or a spade, or any of the tools necessary to produce something to satisfy the appetite you will be creating. Use those tools and your brains at the same time, and in the end you will be better physically and brighter mentally and your table will be well supplied with edibles that have cost you nothing but the exercise every normal constitution demands.

The writer has long had a desire to know what the women folks carry about in the rather large leather reticules that they invariably carry about upon their arms. The first of the week we had our curiosity satisfied when a Tribune subscriber brought in one of these small grips that she had picked up by the roadside, and requested that we advertise the same and endeavor to find the owner. It was an opportunity we long had sought and so we made a careful inventory of the outfit and, as near as we can remember, here it is. A small looking glass; a box of tablets from a local physician; a spectacle case, empty; small black pocketbook containing nothing; a still smaller white purse containing a quantity of starch, flour or some other white powder, highly scented; a handkerchief; a square foot of chamois skin, wrapped in which was a strip of surgeon's gauze; a safety pin; a toothpick; a small bottle labeled essence of peppermint but we would not vouch for its being true to name, and in the bottom rattling around amongst pills, tablets and other ingredients were two nickles and a dime. From this description if the owner can identify same she may call and take it away. No advertising charges.—Burwell Tribune.

There was a deep seated pain right in the center of it. I could hardly sleep owing to it and the next morning I felt tired and worn-out. Doan's Kidney Pills were not long in ridding me of the trouble and of late I haven't had any return of it."
