SUGAR BEET CULTURE

- NEB. Results of Experiments Begun Some Months Ago.

REPORTS ARE NERY GRATIFYING

Efforts of the Burlington to Encourage Diversified Farming-Beets Arriving are Rather Large but Firm and Rich in Saccharine Makeup.

Gratifying results are coming in to the Burlington passenger department from the comprehensive experiments in sugar beet culture begun in Nebraska this spring, says the Omaha World-Herald. It was with the idea of finding out where sugar beets would thrive best and could be grown most profitably that good seed was secured from the state university and sent to responsible farmers located in sixty localities, representative of the entire

In doing this the Burlington seeks to encourage diversified farming in this state, that a crop failure along some particular line may leave the farmer still with good crops, with all of the good results to be derived from rotation of crops.

At the same time close watch is being kept on experiments in New York on a system there introduced of having beet sugar separators, or plants for the preparation of the saccharine substance into the syrup form, located in every locality where beets are grown. This crude syrup is then shipped to immense fineries in the large cities, there to be made into the finished product. So it is the hope that in time every station will have its syrup or raw sugar plant, which will reduce the weight of the material to be shipped to the refinery to about 15 per cent of the beets as they are delivered by the farmers, thus reducing freight charges to a minimum, and giving back to the farmers, or the immediate localities, the 85 per cent of refuse, one of the best cattle feeding foods in the world.

Consequently, all of the beets now arriving at the offices in Omaha from out the state are being broken to pieces and pinched to test the firmness, and chewed up to test the sweetness, and put to other tests. When fall comes, however, the samples from all localities will be submitted to an analytical test to determine results for further experiments. The beets so far arriving are quite large as sugar beets usually go, but are very firm and apparently quite sweet, thus giving the hope that they will prove a rich saccharine product.

An Entire Family Drowned.

OMAHAXID &-H. Wade Gillis of Tekamah, who was in Omaha, informed the World-Herald that a report was received by the Modern Woodmen of Tekamah, announcing the drowning of a famuily from Burt county. A few weeks ago A. W. Blades, his wife and eight children started for Minnesota in an emigrant wagon. At a point in Southern had forgotten, the family camped for the night on a creek. A cloudburst raised the creek twelve or fifteen feet and the family, team and wagon were swept away. No trace of them had been found save in treetops some distance down the creek.

Mr. Blades had resided in Burt county for twenty years, and for the last two or three years had lived on the A. B. Fuller farm near Decatur. The oldest of the children, a daughter, did not accompany the other members of the family on the trip.

Condition of the First.

Official reports from Colonel Mulford, of the First Nebraska, for the months of April and May reached the state house last week. The reports for April showed an aggregate of 996 present and absent, of which 921 were enlisted men and 45 were officers. There were 506 enlisted men for duty and 22 officers for duty. Forty-three officers were present, but only 22 were reported for duty, 3 being on special duty and 18 sick. There were 506 enlisted men reported for duty, 34 on special duty, 289 sick in quarters, 76 in hospital, one under arrest, and one under arrest and in confinement, making a total of 907 enlisted men. The losses for the month of April included 3 killed in action, 6 died of wounds, 2 died of disease and 22 discharged.
