Boers maintained a stubborn rear guard action along a running front of twelve miles on very difficult ground. The British were advancing in three columns. General Tucker, to the southward, occupied Petrusberg unopposed: General Kelly-Kenny, after following the river bank, moved in the direction of Abrahams kraal. At Driefontein, about a mile south of Abrahams kraal, the Boers were found posted in considerable strength on the ridges connecting several kopjes, where they had mounted guns.

The action began at 8 o'clock in the morning with an artillery duel. General French's cavalry and General Porter's brigades supported our guas. The Boer artillery was accurately handled and the British cavalry found a task harder than they had expected. General Broadwood with dogged perseverance moved altogether six miles southward, trying to find a means to get around, but the Boers followed behind rising ground and even attempted to outflank him. Meanwhile the Sixth division of infantry, advancing on the Boer left, slowly forced the enemy to retire. Had the infantry been able to move faster the Boers would have been enveloped. The last shot was fired at 7:30 p.m. This morning not a Boer was to be seen. The prisoners belonged to Pres-

Saturday night the juniors at Vassar entertained themselves with a Bradley-Martin fancy dress ball, which was attended by 150 Vanderbilts, Astors and Goulds. Sprinkled through the throng, to add variety, were foreign noblemen, and the Prince and Princess of Wales dropped in informally to represent the English royal family. The guests were announced at the door by footmen in livery and were received by Mr. and Mrs. Bradley-Martin. Fancy dances and minuets preceded the regular dancing, after which a supper of lemonade and doughnuts was served. The festivities did
