There is but one ticket in the field and that is the present incumbents. We received an anonymous letter Tuesday, criticizing us for the happy way we endeavored to report the hypnotic entertainment in our last issue and signed "One Who Knows." Well, we will admit that the writer "Knows" most everything but it always looks better to affix your own name to a personal letter so that the one addressed may "know" also. The letter referred to charged us with the crime of being "a bald headed scribbler" and "a sawed off undertaker," with a positive suggestion of not knowing anything about hypnosis. It further advises that we publish more news and less pill ads. Well, we publish all the news and fill the rest of our space, which the merchants want, with pill ads, or some other matter that will bring us revenue. In this he has upon a point that we "know" as well as he "knows." We are much obliged to who "knows" for his friendly advice and information and hope that he may "know" more about the mysterious come true in the future than he does now.

CADEZEA.

Sing not to me, sweet,
The song that is so sweet,
Hears that a young heart
With joy of tomorrow,
Gilding the kind heart
With bliss that they borrow.
Hearts that are old fear
Thought of lost gladness,
Not for the dollar or
Music of sadness.
Out and alas, dear,
Hearst that a young heart

ODD TOWN OF CULLODEN.
The Liquor Element "Engineered" the Outhouse out of the Village.
"I reckon we've got the oddest town in our state that there is in the United States," said a West Virginia man. "Ever hear of Culloden? I don't mean the plain of Culloden described by the poet Campbell. I mean Culloden, W. Va. Well, sir, about half the population of the town doesn't live in the town and can't vote in the town, although they are right in the town. "I'll explain. The good people, and they are in the majority, too, are down on saloons and liquor in any shape. They got up a temperance meeting and proposed to drive the liquor men out of town. When you find a West Virginian who believes in liquor, you find a man who is ready to fight for it. The liquor people got together and in some way got the confidence of the town engineer. I don't know whether he was a liquor man or not, but they got him on their side. The engineer discovered that the town was not laid out right, and he got authority to change the metes and bounds. When he finished the job, the temperance people found out that they lived just outside of the line of the town, no matter what part of the town their houses were in. A man could stand in his back yard and talk to the man whose place was right up against his place and who was a voter, but the first man had lost his vote. "The lines of the engineer excluded, as I have said, the temperance people. It took in the license folk all right. The map of Culloden as it is now looks a good deal like a sheet of paper after a fly with ink on its feet meanders across it. You can tell how a citizen of Culloden stands on the liquor question by the place where he builds a house. If he builds one, which doesn't often occur, in spite of the zoning boundaries, however, Culloden is a contented community."—New York Sun.

FOR SALE OR RENT FOR CASH.

The N. E. fourth of Sec. 33, 16, 15, is fenced for pasture and located about five miles from Loup City, close to A. Baillies farm house, also the northwest of the northwest fourth of Sec. 29, 16, 15, near Larson's farm. The recent starting up of a colossal packing house at Sioux City and slaughtering daily about 2500 head of stock furnishes a valuable comparative stock market with South Omaha for this region, thereby making stock raising far more profitable than the raising of grain. The long stretches of fences going up in every direction would indicate that pasture land surrounding Loup City are becoming more valuable and scarce.
