The pops seem to be out of town. The democrats squelched his ambition.

No, of course not, the Kansas City convention was not a prize fight, nor a debating school, nor a farce comedy nor even a circus. It was a mixture of them all.

Senator Teller had his silver side show working in conjunction with the main democratic circus at Kansas City, and every time a democrat expectorated in his direction he smiled and whooped her up.

Mark Hanna the great dictator from a democratic standpoint, why he could not even tell the Republicans at Philadelphia, who to nominate for vice-president, when W. J. Bryan even told the democrats when to sneeze.

The Belgian courts have decided that the attempted assassination of the prince of Wales in that country last spring was only a huge joke. That may be good logic but it would seem like carrying the joke a little too far.

A surplus of $81,000.00 for the last fiscal year is a pretty good showing for Republican party government considering that heavy war expenses, as well as the ordinary expenditures of Government were paid out of the receipts. When we add that the national debt has been decreased by some $40,000,000 in the same time, the showing becomes phenomenal.

A meeting of the big guns of Democracy will be held in Lincoln, the present axis of the unwashed, all this week and terminating in a big hoodoo next Tuesday, by which time they expect to have plans laid whereby they can deceive themselves into a reasonable amount of hope. Sixteen-to-wun is a dead issue, anti-expansion don't take, Imperialism is too thin for the masses to swallow and militarism won't take with anybody. They hope by boiling their entire four grievances together to form a concentrated essence of damphoodiness sufficient for a democratic issue.

The democratic nominee for vice-president of the United States, Mr. Stevenson was given a grand reception on his arrival at Lincoln last Monday. The populist candidate Mr. Towne was also there as also was chairman Jones and other distinguished leaders of the fusion forces. When Mr. Bryan introduced Mr. Stevenson to the big crowd he spoke of him as "the next vice-president of the United States." This must have been rather gauling for Towne and his admirers to hear. The populist of this state can plainly see that they have been entirely sold out. The populist tail to Bryan's kite is by him ignored when he publicly stands for the election of Stevenson as against Towne.

To enter into a falsehood either acted, told or sanctioned, is generally sufficient grounds to create a feeling of distrust among those one is seeking to carry favor with and generally when people discover that a man will allow his good name to be smirched by even the least show of hypocrisy they loose confidence in him, for steadfast sturdy honesty must be the main attribute to gain and retain confidence of the people. The man who will allow his over zealous friends to decide for his sake if even he does not contribute to it himself must be considered as unfit for a great public trust. The press and the public are too much given to casting slurs and innuendoes towards public men and not everything you hear can be believed by any means, but when a public man whom all know to be a lawyer will allow whole pages of an illustrated paper to be used, sending broadcast pictures, portraying his farm life and contributing to it by placing himself in all conceivable poses, even to dawning an old suit and stripping his pants to the top of his boots and with a check shirt on, stand with his back to the camera as Mr. Bryan has done, we must ask ourselves has the American people gone crazy to nominate a patron for the presidency and will the voters support him. Throwing dirt should be beneath the dignity of a dog, misrepresenting public men on the same level, but what can be said of the man who misrepresents himself. Last Sunday's Bee contained the portraits referred to, a paper hostile to Mr. Bryan. What must it have cost him to get them in that paper? Two full page illustrations, not less than $500 we opine. Can you trust the man for president who will resort to chicanery? The president of the United States should be like Caesar's wife, "must be above suspicion."

The large crowd which was here during the Fourth was evidence of the fact that it does not necessarily take horse racing to draw the people together, or in other words there are many other attractions which serve equally as well and equally interests the public. Horse racing is all right in its place and while it interests the people to a certain extent, it does not meet with the success it once did. Perhaps this is so because it attracts the rowdy element, which often causes annoyance and leaves an unpleasant feeling. Not to say that the horsemen themselves are of such character, but the hangers on are principally the ones to cause dissatisfaction. There were nearly, if not quite a 1,000 people here on the Fourth, perhaps the largest crowd we have had for years; and this without a horse race on the program and also without a jar in the whole proceedings of the day.

On Wednesday of this week to the strains of martial music a caravan of ye Knights of Pythias was observed wending their way from their Castle Hall in a westerly direction, bound on the conquest of Baillie's grove. It is reported it was conquered with but one man badly wounded (Knight Sharp.) After the inhabitants had been completely routed the Knights gave themselves over to feasting and pleasure. Knight Long introduced Knight Nightingale, who cautioned the assembled Knights that in view of the period of peace and rest from immediate warfare that especially should our bachelor Knights consider the advisability of taking to themselves some fair maiden of the realm, and thereupon, Knights Will Odendahl and Clint Outhouse swore solemn oaths to vie with each other in the pursuit and conquest of some fair lady. To give these Knights a fair opportunity for an immediate selection, contests and races were held in the Arena in which the ladies vied with each other for supremacy, but as many of the ladies acquitted themselves so meritoriously it is not yet divulged to man on whom the choice is to fall. The picnic was attended by 75 people and all enjoyed the outing.
