body, the finish match between he and "Farmer" Kersenbrock was changed by consent of the principles to a contest limited to one hour and thirty minutes, providing one or the other did not secure a fall during that time. The moment the big fellows came to the center of the mat and were introduced, business began and there was not 30 seconds of time that they were not working to the limit. Kersenbrock from the start put himself on the defensive, underneath, with Miller behind ders to the mat. This proved impossible, and there was scarcely a time when either of the men was in close danger of defeat. They were quite evenly mstched, Miller being perciptibly the stronger. while Kersenbrock was the quickest, being able to break any hold and bound out of danger with the agility of a cet. It was a battle royal and neighter was able to get any perceptible advantage over the other.

At the close of the contest, Mil ler issued a challenge to Kersenbrock to meet him here in two weeks time, for a finish contest for the entire gate receipts and $200 on the side, which the latter quickly accepted, giving Miller credit for being a mighty good man, but expressing his belief of winning.
