We do not believe any of our people in this neck o' the woods are in favor of University removal. If so, we have not heard from them. To us there seems every reason for opposition to removal. It would mean millions of cost to the taxpayers of the state and without adequate compensation. With comparatively little cost, additional ground can be secured adjoining the present site, while removal means loss of present buildings, new and costly buildings erected on the proposed site, and what is worse than all to our belief is the fact that removal would mean that many students who work their way through the University by securing work here and there over the city would be compelled to quit the school when taken so far away as they could not hold positions which give them the necessary financial aid to carry them along. Leave the University where it is and thus help our young men and women to gain a State University education.

Just now the democratic party is having so much grief of its own that it has no time at its disposal to digest the republican-progressive doings. To be sure, the party which has surprised itself by securing governmental control tries to forget its own grief by calling attention to the attempt at harmony in republican ranks, but their piteous condition is so acute that they cannot dwell on for any length of time anything but their own woeful affairs. They are in no position to do otherwise. In the meantime, the two wings of the republican party are slowly but surely coming together, and democracy in state and nation sees its finish in the coming state and national elections. And that is sure as anything can be.

What a mix-up the democrats of the state have got into on the gubernatorial question. First Morehead was going to get out of that part of the game and into the congressional race, but afterwards changed (?) his mind and got back into the running for re-nomination, after several fellows had filed for the governorship. Then after quiet was partially restored, Dick Metcalfe comes home from the Panama canal and concludes he wants to be governor and further complicates matters. Oh there is merry sheol among the Bryan and anti-Bryan hosts of Nebraska, and everything is up in the air from the legion of pie hunters.

What in the world will Bryan do and how can he possibly keep the wolf from the door, if he is stopped from his mountebank chautauqua money-earning work. You must not expect that he can possibly live on a thousand dollars a month he gets from the government for posing as an exponent of peace with Mexico on the "watchful waiting" program. It is possible that the people will of necessity have to make up subscription lists to tide him over his present crisis? Or will his postoffice appointees come to his relief?

Just at present, with the democratic administration slowly approaching dissolution, it is said that the democratic postmasters are beginning to hedge and plan for all postoffices to be taken out of politics and under civil service rules, that in event of democratic defeat they may not be ousted from their gravy-buying places and go down and out with their party. That is what might be expected. Self preservation with them beats party affiliation to a finish. Anything with them to save their jobs, eh?

Who has noticed any reduction in the cost of living as a result of the democratic tariff law? And by the way has any one noticed any progress made by the democratic part in solving the trust problem? And isn't it funny how cordially the democratic party takes up and houses the equal suffrage ideal?

Representative Trumble was over from Hazard last Thursday and filed for re-nomination for representative at the hands of the democratic party of Sherman county. We do not know of a better or more satisfactory man the party could hand the plum to than the genial and talented Hazard man.
