Hempel Jones has postponed his public sale till next Wednesday, 17th, on account of the big storm.

Mr. Harry B. Doppf, a traveling man, whose home is at Fullerton, was one of the enforced residents of this city during the big storm and being a former newspaper man made his headquarters more or less of the time at the Northwestern office. Being also a licensed embalmer he stood ready to stick the harpoon into any one of the festive bunch of "Coxy's" braves, should the exigencies of the occasion of enforced retirement from the wicked world for a season make them "dead ones." Perhaps that fact assisted in keeping them "alive" during the siege.

Owing to the storm, of course, the president of Hastings could not be here to fill the Presbyterian pulpit Sunday, and for the same very good reason, Dist. Supt. Isham failed to be here to hold quarterly conference and preach for our Methodist friends. This information, however, is not of particular value to us shut-ins, but given for the benefit of the shut-outs, rather.

OVERDRAFTS

The Comptroller of the Currency, at Washington, D. C., has issued instructions to all National Banks to positively discontinue the practice of allowing overdrafts, and has asked the co-operation of all the State Banks to that end.

We will obey this order, same as we have always obeyed all laws and orders of the Federal Banking Department, and know that our customers will not expect us to do otherwise.

In compliance with above order, and for the following reasons, on and after April 1st, next, we will cash no checks on overdrawn accounts.

1st. It is not considered good or conservative banking to allow overdrafts.

2nd. Whilst the overdraft is used in most instances as a matter of mere temporary accommodation, and with the best of intention, it is in some instances used to obtain, or try to obtain, credit that could not be arranged for in the regular way, which is a source of annoyance to both bank and to the customer who presents a check on which the bank refuses payment.

3rd. The check is almost universally used now days, very little actual money is handled any more in settling accounts and the check as one of the greatest conveniences of our day should be made as reliable as the actual money itself and the one and only way to accomplish that is to put a stop to the issuance of worthless checks.

4th. Both the National and State Departments prohibit the payment of checks on overdrafts.

5th. The officer of a bank that pays a check on an overdraft is personally liable under both the National and State Banking Laws.

6th. The elimination of the overdraft practice will in reality work no hardship on any one. It will not mean a dollar less credit to the bank's customers, but only that they will have to keep what credit they need in the form of a note, instead of part overdraft and part note.

7th. This notice is issued in strict compliance with the law and we ask for your most hearty and pleasant co-operation in assisting us to obey the Banking Laws under which we are doing a Banking Business.
