Words from Andrew Carnegie

Andrew Carnegie's words concerning saving should carry weight. He has tried it and he knows. He says:

"For every dollar you can produce as a result of hard earned savings, Midas, in search of a partner, will lend on credit a thousand. It is not capital that men require; it is the man who has proved that he has the business habits that create capital."

A good sized vote was recorded at the special election Tuesday, which was submitted to the voters by the village trustees to see whether the citizens of Arcadia wished polltax licenses issued or not. Eighty-five votes being registered for balls and sixty-six against, giving a majority of nineteen. Some time ago the trustees refused to renew the licenses but owing to the comment arising from such a move thought it best to give the voters a chance to express their views and if a sufficient majority favored re-issuing the licenses the board would reconsider their action and give the public this popular form of amusement.—Arcadia Champion.
