ILLS BLAMED TO CITY LIFE

Conditions in congested communities Net Likely to Lead to Long Abode on Earth.

Forty years will soon be the old-age mark for business men if there does not come a change in the manner of living in cities, according to deductions of Dr. Louis B. Wells, physical director of the New York West Side Y. M. C. A. These deductions are based on the examination of more than 2,000 men during the last year.

Notwithstanding all that has been said about the advantage of a sound mind in a sound body, the tendency in large cities, Doctor Wells says, is to go on demonstrating excessive activity of mind. The condition is said to be peculiar to hustling business men. Result: tuberculosis, because of the campaign against it, has been on the decrease, while diseases of the heart, arteries and kidneys, which belong normally only to old age, have been on the increase, until there are more dying from the latter than from tuberculosis.

We are told that life is too tense, and this tense condition is allowed to hold on too long. A more general regard for the advantage of play that will cause complete forgetfulness of business is suggested as the only solution of the problem of insuring rational health conditions.

According to Notice.

During a sham fight which constituted part of a certain infantry battalion training for the war a company was told off to follow up the retreating "enemy." For this purpose the pursuers, who had been having a strenuous time, had to cross a fairly wide river, and were marched to the nearest bridge, which was about four miles away. Imagine their disappointment on arriving to find this notice attached to the bridge of the "enemy": "This bridge is blown up." But the officer in command of the pursuers was a man of action, and promptly attached a notice to one of his leading men and proceeded to march his force across the bridge. They had almost crossed it, when an umpire suddenly appeared, frantically waving his hand and exclaiming: "The bridge is blown up; all these men are drowned!" The commanding officer made no reply, but simply pointed to his notice, which read: "This company is swimming across!"

Reliable Method.

"Can you spell the name of this new high explosive?" asked the man who shirks.

"Yes," replied the one who never at a loss.

"How do you spell it?"

"By looking in the dictionary."

HAD THE LAUGH ON HIMSELF

Miser Got Away With the Oatmeal and Also Succeeded in Saving Precious Whisky.

J. F. Hartz of Detroit, the doyen of the American Surgical Trade association, said at the fiftieth annual convention in New York:

"The war has kited the price of carbolic acid up to $1.65 a pound—it sold before the war at 9 cents a pound. The hospitals that use carbolic acid now have to be as economical and sparing as old Josh Lee.

"Old Josh Lee was a miser, and he breakfasted every morning on oatmeal. To save fuel he cooked his week's supply of oatmeal on Sundays. This supply, by the time Saturday came around, was pretty stiff and tough and hard to down.

"One Saturday morning old Josh found his oatmeal particularly unappetizing. It had a crust on it like iron. He took a mouthful of the cold, stiff mixture—then he half rose, thinking he'd have to cook himself some eggs.

"But he hated to give in. He hated to waste that oatmeal. So he took out the whisky bottle, poured a generous glass and setting it before his plate, he said:

"Now, Josh, if you eat that oatmeal you'll get this whisky; and if you don't you won't."

"The oatmeal was hard to consume, but Josh, with his eye on the whisky, managed it. Then, when the last spoonful was gone, he grinned broadly, poured the whisky back into the bottle again, and said:

"Josh, my son, I fooled you that time, you old idiot!"—Washington Star.

Cool Request.

"Would you be kind enough to return my photograph?" she wrote. "I gave it to you in a moment of girlish folly, and I have since had occasion to regret that I was so thoughtless in such matters."

Of course she pictured that photograph framed and hung up in his room, and was inclined to think that he would part from it with deep regret. Just why she wanted it returned is immaterial. Of course, he had offended her in some way, and she wished to test his love, but it is unnecessary to inquire how.

The answer to her note came the following day.

"I regret," it read, "that I am unable at this late date to pick out your photograph. However, I send you my entire collection, numbering a little over 500, and would request that you return all except your own by passenger train at my expense."

Fine Score.

"Lady," said Ploddin Pete, "could you spare a hungry man a meal o' victuals?"

"You go away from here or I'll call my husband."

"Is that there stoop-shouldered man plowin' corn in the next field your husband?"

"Yes, it is."

"I take back what I said. I've got a heart in me, I have. If you've got a meal o' victuals for a poor starvin' man, give it to your husband."

Worth Listening To.

"Those two men over there are having a warm argument. It must be about the war."

"I think not. They are probably discussing a subject they know something about."

Why so?

"Half a dozen pedestrians and the policeman on this beat seem interested in what they are saying."

To Be Sure.

"You seldom hear of a man after he enters prison."

"That isn't surprising."

"No."

Good Address.

Joseph E. Widener, the millionaire sportsman, was talking in Newport about homes.

"Philadelphia is the city of homes," he said, "but if your home is north of Market street you are considered, socially speaking, out of it. Your home must be south of Market street—you must live down town—if you would be a social personality in Philadelphia."

"And yet, after all," said an Englishman, "what difference does it make where a man lives?"

"It makes all the difference in the world," said Mr. Widener. "A fact that is well remembered about Diogenes is today is that he lived in a tub."
