Red Tape.

One of the features of the Brazilian tariff system which has caused considerable trouble to American exporters is the system of fines and penalties which is attached not only to actual and intentional infractions of the law, but which arise even in cases where there is actual and proper differences of opinion.

For instance, in entering goods for importation in Brazil it is necessary to enter them in the right class or be lined for making the mistake. In case the importer is not satisfied with the ruling he can appeal to a board composed of customs officials and thence to the ministry of finance.

If he wins, he is free from a fine or a penalty and gains his point. If he loses, he is fined, whether there was reasonable ground for his contention or not. It should be added that under the law half of the fine goes to the informer or the customs officer discovering the error.—Detroit News-Tribune.

USED PARABLE TO MAKE POINT

Author's Clever, if Somewhat Egotistical Answer to Query.

A reporter being a great admirer of the novels of William Dean Howells, once asked this famous writer why it was that his novels did not sell nearly so well as those of—and here the reporter mentioned a half-dozen well-known names.

Mr. Howells with a smile replied: "A certain quack stood one afternoon before the door of his rich mansion when a physician of great learning and talent passed. "The two men fell into talk, and the physician, a plain-spoken person, said rather bitterly to the quack: "How comes it that you, without education, skill or the least knowledge of medicine, are able to live in the style you do? You keep your town house, your carriage, your motor and your country house, while I, allowed to possess some knowledge, have none of these things, and indeed can little more than pick up a bare subsistence. "The quack laughed good-naturedly. "Look here," said he; "how many people do you think have passed us since you asked that question?" "Well," said the other, "about a hundred."

"And out of that hundred how many do you think possess good common sense?" "Possibly one," was the reply. "Well," said the quack, "that one comes to you, and I take care of the other ninety-nine."

A Golfing Hint.

"Now, what shall I do?" inquired the beginner, having run through the gamut of his clubs. "Try kicking it," advised his caddie, who had been an interested spectator of the orgy.
