OBITUARIES

V. A. Zimmerman
Last Friday afternoon, at the Methodist church in this city, before a very large audience of relatives and friends, and under the auspices of his brethren of the I. O. O. F. order, with the casket and rostrum smothered with beautiful flowers, to sweet music and a few chosen words from the pastor, occurred the funeral services of V. A. Zimmerman, whose life was cut off in the very flower of early manhood, and the body laid to rest in the Silent City of our Dead.

In the death of V. A. Zimmerman, the entire community mourns with his family and intimate friends. Time, as he was familiarly called, lived a life every one could but admire, and as it was his desire to live as he should die, he kept this in mind and always had a pleasant word and sunny smile for every one. Although suffering from that dreaded disease, tuberculosis, he bore up bravely to the last, desiring to save his devoted wife and friends all anxiety possible, keeping up courage to the last in face of the inevitable.

Some three weeks since he, with his brother, W. D. Zimmerman, went to Albuquerque, N. M., hoping the climate might be of benefit to him, but without avail, the brother remaining with him and rendering every assistance in his power until the end.

V. A. Zimmerman was born in Webster county, Ohio, in 1884, where he lived until his mother's death, after which he came to Nebraska, where he made his home until five years ago, when he went to San Diego, Calif., and engaged in mercantile business. After a prosperous year, he returned to Loup City and Sept. 25th, 1907, was united in wedlock to Miss Coraline Leisinger, returning immediately to San Diego with his bride. A year later, owing to ill-health, he moved into country, but the change brought no relief and last June, he, with wife and baby, returned to Loup City.

After only a stay of one short week in Albuquerque, at 5 o'clock on the morning of Sunday, Sept. 26th, 1909, while sitting in his chair, he fell peacefully into the sleep that has no awakening. Besides a wife and darling little babe, deceased leaves a father, four brothers, one sister many near relatives and an untold number of friends.
