SAVED BABY LYON'S LIFE.

Awful Sight from That Dreadful Complaint, Infantile Eczema—Mother Praises Cuticura Remedies.

"Our baby had that dreadful complaint, infantile Eczema, which afflicted him for several months, commencing at the top of his head, and at last covering his whole body. His sufferings were untold and constant misery, in fact, there was nothing we would not have done to have given him relief. We finally procured a full set of the Cuticura Remedies, and in about three or four days he began to show a brighter spirit and really laughed, for the first time in a year. In about ninety days he was fully recovered. Praise for the Cuticura Remedies has always been our greatest pleasure, and there is nothing too good that we could say in their favor, for they certainly saved our baby's life, for he was the most awful sight that I ever beheld, prior to the treatment of the Cuticura Remedies. Mrs. Maebelle Lyon, 1826 Appleton Ave., Parsons, Kan., July 18, 1905."

Point Won by Flattery.

Gen. French, the English officer who represented that country at the recent French maneuvers, received the following letter after his triumphant return from the Boer war:

"My Dear French: You are a great British general. I want your autograph; but, whatever you do, don't let your secretary write it."

Needless to say, the boy got the autograph, and a signed photograph of his hero to boot.

Successfully Paints on Metal.

Carl Lunde, a Norwegian artist, has made himself famous by painting on metal, an art even the Japanese have failed in, great as they are as metal workers. Lunde decorates ordinary tin with characteristic designs in colors and illuminates an ordinary tray or plate that would otherwise be cheaply jappanned. The method is his secret and only one of many clevernesses he employs to render utility artistic and decorative.

ON FASHION'S HIGHWAY

By FRANCES RIVERS

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Toward five o'clock, on a supremely hot July day, Mr. Godfrey Boyne strolled leisurely along the gravel path of the promenade.

He loitered, seemingly at random, making his way slowly between groups of animated people, stopping for no reason, and remained idly gazing over the heads of the crowd on fashion's highway.

At any rate, he thought, applying this recollection as healing unction to the scratches imprinted on his vanity by the acid of such general forgetfulness, Audrey has remembered; and he, smiling, recalled the facility with which intimacy with Lady Annandale had been resumed; the friendly informality with which she had reentered into relations with him; the bewildering immensity of her social influence; the celebrity which, at first as the wife, then as the widow, of a viscount, notorious in career and memory for his many vices, she had acquired.

He had taken himself to Fashion's highway, the purpose of joining Lady Annandale being less distinct in his thoughts than the wish to see her. So immersed was he in reflection that he failed to notice that a victoria had stopped opposite to him. Suddenly a footman addressed him:

"I beg your pardon, sir," said he, "but her ladyship sent me to say that she wishes to speak to you."

Godfrey turned; Lady Annandale was stepping from the carriage.

"You can go home," said she to the footman.

"Very good, my lady."

Then she gave to Godfrey her hand. "This place—" she glanced round at the radiant prospect—"seems scarcely the spot suited to serious discussion. We might, perhaps, over there."

So, side by side, Lady Annandale and Mr. Godfrey Boyne walked across the soft, green turf and established themselves upon chairs under the sweet-scented lime trees, whose sheltering boughs masked them from observation.

He beamed amiably round.

"I have brought you here, that you may continue your last night's interrupted account of the woman with whom you were in love," said she.

"Was in love? It's absurd to use the past tense. I am in love with her. Love is not a state from which you can recover as from an epidemic. I am, of course, speaking of the real thing."

"I see; something other than flirtation."

"Flirtation is but the froth of love."

Lady Annandale laughed. "Passion! does your real thing include that?"

"Passion is love's dregs, besides being Cupid's pseudonym for the work he is ashamed to acknowledge."

"I had no idea I was speaking to an expert; but how, may I ask, did you come to study the subject so profoundly?"

"In Ceylon, beyond love's influence, I devoted some attention to the science."

She raised her eyebrows.

"Is that all you learned?"

"That, and to make money."

"To make money?"

"Certainly. I'm a wealthy tea-planter of Ceylon."

"A wealthy tea-planter, did you say? But to return to your love," she suggested.

"You can't return to a thing you've never parted from, can you?"

"Then you know more of the subject?"

"A great deal more."

"How much?"

"Here it is. I see a boy and girl, the joyful intimacy of their childhood deepening into the poetry of youth—"

"And, of course, the girl knows that the boy loves her?"

"Naturally; since not an hour of the day passes but he tells her so."

"Tells her? Surely not."

"By every means in his power, except his tongue. He doesn't put it into words, because he knows that to do so would be hopeless if she doesn't understand without that."

"Don't you think she might make a mistake if he says nothing?"

"But she must know that he dreams his dream of the future, in which, having made a nest and lined it softly with down, he will come to her and say: 'It awaits you.' Then he hopes that, with the gracious spirit manifest in all her bearing, the girl, with love and tenderness shining from her eyes, would, putting her hand in his, say: 'I am ready.'"

"Your vision is charming, idyllic; but how about the girl and her dreary days of waiting, for I suppose the boy to have gone off into the world?"

"He had to go into it to fill his man's part."

"Before going he should have told her in words of his love."

"You really think that his doing so would have made any difference—when all that he was then in a position to ask was faithfulness?"

Lady Annandale sighed.

"This particular girl was probably brought up to marry, as, had she been a boy, she would have been brought up to some profession. In your vision, what became of her?"

"She fulfilled what I see you consider to have been her destiny."

"Marriage?"

"Yes; she married a peer."

"And was happy ever after, according to the formula?"

"I suppose so. Isn't every woman happy who achieves rank and is an acknowledged beauty?"

"And the boy?"

"Woke from rosy dreams in the sunlight to find that in the time of his slumbering the sky had become overcast."

"And blamed the girl for a fault that was his own?"

"No; he didn't blame her, but for a time he was heartbroken."

"Did he lose sight of her altogether?"

"Not altogether; for when, in the fullness of time, she was again free, he came back to her."

Playwright's Method of Work.

Mr. A. W. Pinero has an unusual method of writing his plays. His work day does not begin until that of the average city man is over. In the morning he goes out, preferably on his bicycle, returning in time for early dinner. Then he has a comfortable sleep, and on waking up, late in the afternoon, he prepares for business. After a cup of tea he goes to his desk and remains working at his play until far into the night.

A Good Record.

Out of all the external remedies on the market we doubt if there is one that has the record of that world-renowned porous plaster—Alcock's. It has now been in use for sixty years, and still continues to be as popular as ever in doing its great work of relieving our pains and aches. It is the remedy we all need when suffering from any ache or pain resulting from taking cold or overstrain.

Alcock's Plasters are sold by Druggists all over the world.

John Stuart Mill.

James Mill, his father, was a hard man, a clever man, and a crank—a hedonist capable of making himself thoroughly disagreeable about the greatest happiness of the greatest number; a theorist who regarded his clever son as a suitable object for educational experiments.

He would not send him to school because schools were the fortresses of "prejudice," and taught the wrong things in the wrong way. He provided him with no playmates, and allowed him no holidays, lest "the habit of work should be broken."—Francis Gribble, in Fortnightly Review.

depends so much upon her functions, that the least upset of them affects her whole system. It is the little things that count, in woman's life and health. The little pains, and other symptoms of womanly disorder, soon lead up to big things,—serious pains, serious diseases. It is for just these ordinary, common, womanly troubles, that the use of a gentle, strengthening, female tonic, like

WINE OF CARDUI

Woman's Relief

has been found so successful, in thousands of cases, in relieving and curing. "I had been troubled with female complaints for 12 months," writes Mrs. Bettie Arp, of Ballplay, Tenn., "and although I was under doctors' care for four months, they did but little good. I took one bottle of Wine of Cardui and one dollar's worth of Thedford's Black-Draught, and now I am better. I believe Cardui saved my life. We are poor people, but I shall always keep it in the house." It relieves woman's worst pains and regulates fitful functions. Try it.

"I Couldn't Go," She interrupted.

that it is advisable sometimes to shake it up anew."

Then, seriously, he added: "Oh, my dearest, we have lost ten years!"

"You would wish to take me to Ceylon?"

He saw the pupils of her eyes contract at the unattractiveness of the suggestion.

"Of course, if—"

"If Godfrey had come to her with the intention she believed, or even if this intention had been caused by the spell of proximity, he must be no longer mistaken in her meaning. 'I couldn't go,' she interrupted.

"Then we will leave Ceylon to take care of itself," he said, carelessly, taking no more notice of her words than if she had not said them.

"You seriously mean that?"

"I was never more serious in my life. I will abandon that nest and make another over here."

"Then we come to the second count—your heart. Are you quite, quite sure that it is negotiable flesh, not in a battered condition?"

"I swear—"

"You needn't; for, oddly enough, I believe you."

"You are the only woman I have ever cared for."

"Does not every man tell every woman that?" She looked into his eyes and laughed.

Then, across this chasm Lady Annandale lightly threw a plank, accomplishing with a woman's dexterity, more in one moment than Godfrey had been able to do in weeks of arduous work.

Vaguely, in a tremor of unformulated hope, Godfrey saw that that which had appeared to him as the end might really be but the beginning.

"In all the phrases, creeds, commonplaces which you have said of love, you have omitted to enumerate the only attributes that woman recognizes," said she, and paused to beg him, by a little Sphinx-like smile, to pay attention to her words.

"These are its power of over-riding every obstacle; of conferring upon woman a little higher than that of queen."

"Go on, please, go on," he stammered.

She looked straight into his eyes. "You are dense and stupid if you cannot understand how dear to some women may be the name of 'wife.'"

Quaker Had No Passes.

One of the most famous of American shipping lines in the palm days of our marine was the Cope line, which ran between Philadelphia and Liverpool, says the author of "Memoirs of Charles H. Cramp." By this line John Randolph of Roanoke determined to go to Russia, when he had been appointed minister to that country by President Jackson.

Entering the office of the company in Philadelphia, he said to a clerk in his usual grandiloquent manner: "Sir, I wish to see Thomas P. Cope."

He was shown to Mr. Cope's office.

"I am John Randolph of Roanoke," he said. "I wish to take passage to Liverpool in one of your ships."

If he expected to be tendered a pass he was grievously disappointed.

"I am Thomas Cope," replied the head of the line. "If thee gets aboard the ship and selects thy stateroom and will pay $150 thee may go."—Youth's Companion.

WHAT JOY THEY BRING TO EVERY HOME

as with joyous hearts and smiling faces they romp and play—when in health—and how conducive to health the games in which they indulge, the outdoor life they enjoy, the cleanly, regular habits they should be taught to form and the wholesome diet of which they should partake. How tenderly their health should be preserved, not by constant medication, but by careful avoidance of every medicine of an injurious or objectionable nature, and if at any time a remedial agent is required, to assist nature, only those of known excellence should be used; remedies which are pure and wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, like the pleasant laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. Syrup of Figs has come into general favor in many millions of well informed families, whose estimate of its quality and excellence is based upon personal knowledge and use.

Syrup of Figs has also met with the approval of physicians generally, because they know it is wholesome, simple and gentle in its action. We inform all reputable physicians as to the medicinal principles of Syrup of Figs, obtained, by an original method, from certain plants known to them to act most beneficially and presented in an agreeable syrup in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to promote the pleasant taste; therefore it is not a secret remedy and hence we are free to refer to all well informed physicians, who do not approve of patent medicines and never favor indiscriminate self-medication.

Please to remember and teach your children also that the genuine Syrup of Figs always has the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package and that it is for sale in bottles of one size only. If any dealer offers any other than the regular Fifty cent size, or having printed thereon the name of any other company, do not accept it. If you fail to get the genuine you will not get its beneficial effects. Every family should always have a bottle on hand, as it is equally beneficial for the parents and the children, whenever a laxative remedy is required.
