The Back Yard.

Paris is a city noted everywhere for beauty, not merely of architecture, but of nature, and the art which good taste is able to evolve from nature. Particularly is it known for the beauby of its trees and flowers and parks. The chief gardener of the city of Paris has been spending a two months' vaca-Mon in the United States, studying American methods in developing city parks and gardens. He found much to praise, but had nothing but condemnation for the American city back yard. In New York, particularly, he sound the back yards incredibly ugly and neglected-no grass, no trees, no vines, no flowers. The criticism would hold good of almost any American city, but the matter is one which young landscape architects are beginning seriously to consider. . One such in Boston, says the Youth's Companion, is making a special study of the problem of converting a few square yards of brick pavement into a Httle secluded bower of greenery, where the family can have a restful hour or a pleasant meal, in surre indings far more attractive than the average roof-garden affords. Manufacturers interested in this young man's work have produced special pieces of garden furniture, of cement and terracotta. A New Yorker has recently told, in print, of the curiosity he felt at the wording of an advertisement of some apartments to rent. One of the for the reason mentioned. attractions mentioned was the outlook on real trees and back yards which were gardens. Later conversation with the agent disclosed the fact that the modest attempt at beauty which the windows commanded was a real asset. It raised the rentable value of Cultivate the Imagination. He who can read easily and understandingly possesses the key to all human knowledge. If he reads with imagination alert, his mind will be progressive. He will become more and more self-reliant, and will become self-confident as he realizes the strength of his imaginative powers. He will each day become more valuable to himself and to his employer, because he is alert and receptive, and because imagination will permeate all his ideals, his thoughts and his activities. The man with imagination is equal to all emergencies, for when one way of accomplishing a desired result proves inefficient, he will think of another, says the New York World. The imaginative gift broadens the outlook and creates resourcefulness. To the artist, the student, and the philosopher, the development of the imaginative faculty is of the greatest value. but to the worker in the business or mechanical world its value is little less. The man who has imaginative strength never can be downed, for when one of his schemes has failed, he always has another ready, and will persist until he achieves success.

Not long ago, the Youth's Companion, in an article on English historical pageants, made the suggestion that something of a similar kind might well form a part of anniversary celebrations in this country. Since then something of the sort has taken place. The observance of "Ohio day" by the town of Rutland, Mass., was made intensely interesting, and also historically valuable, by a pageant in which men, women and children were dressed as were the pioneers of Gen. Rufus Putnam's band, and drawn by alow-moving oxen hitched to "prairie schooners." More lately still the approval by Lord Tennyson of a pageant with scenes taken from his father's poems, as a celebration of the hundredth anniversary of the poet's birth. has led to the suggestion on this side of the water that the coming Whittler centenary be marked by a pageant of scenes from the Quaker poet's verse. The simplicity and historic character of much of Whittier's poetry would make this easy.

Santos-Dumont again comes to the front in attempts to solve the problem of aerial navigation. He has a machine which he calls the hydroplane, by which he is confident he can make successful flights, and he has put up a wager to that effect. That may show the inventor's confidence. But the man who can mount in the air and fly at will, in any direction and for as long a time and distance as he may choose, will not be obliged to make bets to convince the public.

CORTELYOU WINS SPURS IN RE LIEVING FINANCIAL TROUBLE.

Success of Secretary of Treasury Is Typical of the Man-Astonished Cabinet by Direct Method Last March.

Washington.-The success of Secre tary Cortelyou of the treasury department in handling the recent complex financial situation in New York is thoroughly typical of the man, say his friends, who declare Secretary Cortelyou has never yet falled not only to rise to every emergency with which he has been confronted, but to rise above it. It may be forgotten by some that the very financiers in Wall street, with whom Secretary Cortelyou held daily conferences and who accepted his word and his advice as law, were less than one year ago opposing his confirmation as secretary of the treasury on the ground that he was not fitted by experience for the position.

While the senate has rarely ever failed to confirm a nomination of a cabinet officer sent to it by a president and while the confirmation of Mr. Cortelyou was never seriously in doubt, nevertheless there was a decided opposition to him in financial circles in New York, which made its presence felt in the senate. Much of this opposition in the senate was charged at the time to animosity of individual senators to the policies of the administration in general with which they were out of sympathy. There was, however, a certain amount of sincere opposition to Mr. Cortelyou

Secretary Cortelyou took hold of the treasury department with a distinct understanding between him and the president that he was to run the department without interference. He had certain policies of his own he wished put into operation, not the least important of which was that he determined to take the treasury not only out of politics but out of the stock market. This was revolution of the worst sort from a Wall street standpoint, but it took just one lesson to teach "the street" that it was face to face with a new regime in the treasury department.

In less than a month after Mr. Cor telyou took his office he got his first baptism of fire. The March panic came on. There is no gainsaying the fact that the new secretary was nervous over the situation. He had his ideas how such things should be handled, but he had never applied them reactically, although assured by sound financiers that they were practical. Right in the heat of the crisis, however, an opportunity came closer at home than he expected for an exhibition of his own confidences in himself and his plans.

That opportunity came at a cabinet meeting. The cabinet was assembled and certain members of it who had been besieged by friends in financial circles to urge that the government come to their assistance crowded around the cabinet table with anxious facés. At the outset of the meeting not one but several joined in the request that the financial crisis be made the subject of the meeting. It is related that the president said he thought it fair that the secretary of the treasury should first be allowed to tell the cabinet what the trouble was and what he had done to remedy it. Secretary Cortelyou in a few words laid the entire framework of the pending financial situation before the cabinet. In an equally short time he told the members what he had done to ease the danger of a panic and he concluded his remarks with this sentence: "That has been done and it is all that will be done." Until the cabinet fully grasped the comprehensiveness of Secretary Cor-telyou's own remedies 'the members sat in open-mouthed astonishment at his audacity in bringing the discussion so abruptly to a close. It was plain from the position he assumed that he would not welcome any further talk on the subject and when the cabinet members realized that all had been done that could be done anyway, there was really nothing more to be said.

LA TRAPPE CHURCH. Ancient Edifice Near Philadelphia to Be Opened for Visitors.

Norristown, Pa. - The ancient hurch of La Trappe, which inspired Longfellow to write some beautiful verses, is to be opened on request to any pilgrims who visit the quiet little spot, a few miles from here, where the historic church still stands, a little shaky in its old age but dignified and beautiful still. If you are sufficiently interested in such ecclesias tical landmarks as to take a trolley trip to La Trappe the keys will be found for you and the ancient and

Within the church you will see the unpainted pews just as they were nailed together by the pioneers. The woodwork is worn smooth by the pressure of successive generations of worshipers on the high backs of the pews, but just as they were constructed in 1743 so they appear to-day. In one corner a quaint old pulpit of walnut, with the high sounding board of ancient days, is the most ornate feature, while upstairs there is all that remains of the pipe organ that was imported from Europe soon after the congregation settled down in its fine new church. What with the antics of the soldiers during the revolutionary war, when music for ribald barrack room ballads was played on the old instrument, and the attacks of vandals and relic hunters, there is little left of the organ but the frame. The pews, the records tell us, were origin of the name La Trappe. It is generally conceded, however, that it originated from the remark of an early settler who had visited a little tavern in the vicinity and who, on being scolded by his wife, stated that he had fallen into the "trap" on his way home.

A curious inscription in the graveyard adjoining the old church records that one John Favinger was born in 1774 and died in 1721, "aged 47 years and seven days." It isn't recorded that the "trap" was responsible for this, but such may have been the case.

Washington.—The resignation of Charlemagne Tower, of Pennsylvania, as American ambassador at Germany.

has been received by President Roosevelt and will be accepted. Announcement was made in Berlin recently that Mr. Tower would retire from the diplomatic service.

The president tendered the ambassadorship to Robert Bacon, of New York, the assistant secretary of state, and in doing so indicated in effect that he was so much pleased with Mr. Bacon's administration of his political office that he should greatly regret to have him leave Washington, but he felt that a selfish consideration of that character on the part of the president should not be permitted to stand in the way of offering to Mr. Bacon an opportunity which would be in the nature of an appreciation to his work and at the same time give him a chance for diplomatic achievement

Mr. Bacon declined the offer, on the ground, it is understood, that he preferred personally to remain in the state department.

An Acute Observer. A one-armed man sat down to his noonday luncheon in a little restaurant the other day, and seated on the right of him was a big, sympathetic individual from the rural district.

The big fellow noticed his neighbor's left sleeve hanging loose and kept eyeing him in a sort of how-didit-happen way. The one-armed man failed to break the ice, but continued o keep busy with his one plying the inner man.

SCHOOL TEACHERS

Also Have Things to Learn.

"For many years I have used coffee and refused to be convinced of its bad effect upon the human system," writes a veteran school teacher. "Ten years ago I was obliged to give up my much loved work in the public schools after years of continuous labor. I had developed a well defined case of chronic coffee poisoning.

"The troubles were constipation, flutterings of the heart, a thumping in the top of my head and various parts of my body, twitching of my limbs, shaking of my head, and, at times after exertion, a general "gone" feeling with a toper's desire for very strong coffee. I was a nervous wreck for years.

"A short time ago friends came to visit us and they brought a package of Postum with them, and urged me to try it. I was prejudiced because some years ago I had drunk a cup of weak, tasteless stuff called Postum which I did not like at all.

"This time, however, my friend made the Postum according to directions on the package, and it won me. Suddenly I found myself improving in most decided fashion.

Idea for a Wash Cloth. A design for a wash cloth which will do away with confusion when several people in the family leave their towels and wash cloths in the bathroom is made as follows: Buy a yard and three-quarters of linen crash, at 16 cents a yard. Buttonhole the edges in scallops with a dull finish floss and work the monogram in the corner with the same floss. This takes but a small amount of time compared with the confusion it does away with.

To improve the flavor and quality of grated or ground mush heat sifted meal on a shallow pan or two pans, if necessary, in a moderate oven till it is deliciously parched, yet not scorched brown or the least blackened.
