

HARD HEARTS ARE MELTED.
W. J. Ford, for five years an employe of the National Roofing Co., tells a tale of suffering that would move the hardest heart. He writes the following letter telling how he was quickly cured by the United Doctors, those master medical specialists, who have their Omaha Institute at 222 Neville block, corner Sixteenth and Harney streets.

Omaha, Neb., March 9, 1910.
"For ten weeks I lay flat on my back with Sciatic rheumatism and kidney trouble and could not move myself in the bed and when I was moved, could scarcely bear the excruciating pain. I had three physicians and tried three or four different kinds of patent medicine in the hope of finding something that would relieve the terrible agony for I could not move hand or foot without suffering more than it seemed possible for one to suffer and live, but nothing seemed to help me.

One day a friend whose wife was under treatment by the United Doctors, came to see me. He told me how quickly she had been helped from the first by these wonderful specialists and how well she had been ever since, and urged me to make a great effort to get to their offices on the second floor of the Neville block, corner Sixteenth and Harney streets. I hired a man to help me and he had to almost carry me into their office. That was four weeks ago and today I walked into their office without even the use of a cane. In two days after beginning the treatment I could notice an improvement and it has been a steady and gradual improvement ever since.

"I feel that I cannot speak too highly of your wonderful new system of treatment and would like to urge all who are sick and suffering to go to the United Doctors."

W. J. FORD.

Forgetting that he had started to draw a gallon of whisky from a barrel in the cellar, A. C. Hilday, proprietor of the Hotel Hilday, Bloomington, Pa., left the spigot turned on and went upstairs. Two hours later he remembered it and hastened there. He found that it had all run away and into the sewer. His loss because of his lapse of memory will be about $160.—Philadelphia Record.

LONGWORTH IN QUANDARY

Nicholas Longworth is the representative in congress from the First Ohio district, which practically means Cincinnati. Mr. Longworth, as everybody knows, is the only son-in-law of Theodore Roosevelt, former president of the United States. Mr. Longworth is a millionaire.

It is nice to be a congressman, nice to be the husband of a former president's daughter, and nice to be a millionaire; still Nicholas Longworth isn't the happiest man on earth. His political path seems rocky enough; his marital relations are ideal and his financial position is one to be envied.

Then why should he be not happy? The answer is simple. He is the son-in-law of Theodore Roosevelt. He is a "stand-patter" and, as such, a friend of Joseph G. Cannon, speaker of the house. Now would Theodore Roosevelt, the greatest Republican, were he at home, approve of the conduct of his son-in-law?

In a recent speech in Washington Mr. Longworth roasted the Insurgents until they were brown. Next day some one asked him how he thought his illustrious father-in-law would regard such conduct.

"There it is again!" angrily exclaimed the son-in-law. "It seems that I am not to be allowed an opinion of my own. Let me say right here, I'm a stand pater and I don't care what Mrs. Longworth's famous father thinks about it. We understand each other pretty well and Mr. Roosevelt has never made any effort to influence me one way or the other. I wish the people would let me be Nicholas Longworth and not always think of me as the son-in-law of Colonel Roosevelt. I was a congressman before I was a son-in-law."

"As a matter of fact, does any one know what Mr. Roosevelt's idea of the present situation is? Being a son-in-law in this case and trying to keep in politics is not all a path of roses. I have a great many constituents who believe that when I say anything worth repeating, if I do, Mr. Roosevelt inspired it, and when I say things that appear silly, or are silly, they express pity for my father-in-law. The only time they give me credit for being myself is when I make a blunder."

"But, regardless of what anyone thinks, I am ready to take the stump and talk as long as my voice will hold out and justify my vote on the tariff bill before any audience in the country."

They have been trying to get Mr. Longworth to run for governor of Ohio, but he says he would rather remain in congress. It wouldn't surprise a lot of people if Mr. Longworth bobs up as a candidate for the senate some of these days. "And," says one of his closest friends, "he'll be a candidate on his record as a member of the house, not as the son-in-law of Theodore Roosevelt."

URGE FAST AS CURE

London Experts Indorse Health Doctrine with Reservations.

Dr. Wallace, Well-Known Woman Physician, Says Conditions Must Be Right Before Ordeal—How the Remedy is Worked.

London.—The experiences described by Upton Sinclair, an American writer, in the current issue of the Contemporary Review, his search for health, and how he ultimately obtained it after a period of fasting, have aroused a good deal of interest among the medical profession here. Many medical experts admit the benefit that one may obtain from fasting, provided, of course, that it be discreetly practiced.

Dr. Wallace, a well-known woman physician of London, and editor of the Herald of Health, is a strong believer in fasting for certain cases. "Fasting is most efficient as a cure," she said in the course of an interview. "I have known it to work remarkable cures in my own experience. The person undergoing the 'no food' cure should take nothing but distilled water and should exercise caution. The weight should be taken before starting the fast, and if it is below the normal food should be taken in reasonable quantities until the patient is the right weight and ready to undertake the complete fast. A fast should not be started in cold weather, for that takes away much of the heat and energy of the organism."

"In my own experience I have known a patient to fast for 15 days and derive only advantage from the ordeal. He had suffered from serious internal trouble since boyhood, and he came to me to ask advice about the fruit diet I recommended. I told him the fasting cure would do him good. When I saw him again several weeks later I hardly recognized him. He held himself upright, and his step was alert and vigorous. His eyes were bright, his tongue a good color and his pulse normal. I learned to my surprise—for I never intended he should go so long without food—that he had fasted for 15 days, taking only distilled water during all that time. And it certainly cured him."

"Another interesting case was brought to my notice by my friend, Dr. Hiller, in Canada. A workman, suffering from a tumor, fasted six weeks, keeping at work all the time, and he

J. J. Hill Sees Record Crop

Says Conditions in His Section of Country Indicate $9,000,000,000 Year—Talks of Rates.

Chicago.—James J. Hill passed through Chicago, returning to St. Paul after a trip to New York. Mr. Hill has an optimistic view of general business conditions, declaring that the crops should exceed those of last year, but was inclined to take a gloomy outlook of the future prospects of the railroads unless they are allowed to advance freight rates to be able to make needed improvements.

CLOTHES HORSE FOR WEALTHY

Prof. Davenport of University of Missouri Says Modern Fashion Creates Immodesties.

Columbia, Mo.—The fashionable woman was characterized as simply a "clothes horse for some rich man to show off his wealth," by Dr. H. J. Davenport, professor of economics, in a lecture before the Home Economics club of the University of Missouri the other night.

"Fashion fixes incipient wings on women's shoulders, humps on their hips and balloons about her feet. It creates artificial and unnecessary immodesties. It presides over the color of our baby blankets; it noses us around through life," he said. "Our pocket books are emptied by fashion in order that our wardrobes may be filled with exhibition garments. It makes half our garments unwearable when not yet outworn. It pursues us to the grave. If there is anything more vulgar than the wedding it is the funeral."

COIN WEIGHT ERROR

Brass Troy Pound, Used for 85 Years, Is Too Heavy.

Tests of Standard Brought Over by Gallatin in 1827 Indicate Lightness of "Yellow" Money—Watchful Eyes Guard.

Washington.—By comparison with the government system of weights here the discovery has been made that the brass troy pound, the basis for the standardization of weights used by the mints and assay offices of the United States, has increased by oxidation seven one-thousandths of a grain since it was brought to this country in 1827.

A suggestion that the accretion by oxidation to the pound probably had amounted to two or three grains caused consternation among treasury officials for a time, for gold coined on such basis would be profitable for export as a commodity. Iridium platinum will be substituted as a standard for the brass if congress sanctions the change. This metal is used in the majority of other countries and at the bureau of standards.

The brass troy pound was brought to the United States by Albert Gallatin, then minister to England, in 1827, and since that time has been the standard of the American mint. It is kept within the innermost of three separate boxes at Philadelphia, and is opened only once a year, this being on the occasion of the visit of the government assay commission, appointed by the president to test the weight and fineness of the coins of the United States. A key to each one of the boxes is kept in different cities, thus preventing possible tampering with the weight by unauthorized persons.

Discovery of the change in the metal is due to Edward Riggs, superintendent of the machinery of the royal mint at London, who at the invitation of A. Platt Andrew, director of the United States mint, was present at the meeting of the assay commission at Philadelphia in February. When he was told that the standard weight shown to him was the same that had been in use for 83 years, he expressed the greatest surprise and asked whether any test of its accuracy ever had been made by modern standards, and at the same time suggesting that in all probability there was a considerable accretion in grains due to the lapse of time.

Soon after the brass pound was brought to Washington, where a comparison with the metric weights at the bureau of standards showed the slight increase that almost a century had developed.

Bats Bring on Small Panic

Frighten Dozen Young Women, and One Bites Only Male Member—Crowd Watches Fun.

Philadelphia.—A swarm of bats invaded the boarding house of Mrs. John Beaman and threw 12 girl boarders into a panic, several of them having fainted before the bats were driven off or killed. William Leybe, the only male boarder, in his fight against the winged intruders, was bitten on the hand, the bat's teeth sinking in to the bone. He was treated at the Pennsylvania hospital.

Miss Agnes New, who occupies the third floor front, was first to discover the bats. They swarmed through her window, flapping their wings and extinguishing the gas. Screaming with terror, the girl tried to reach the door, but was unable to find it. Her cries aroused the other occupants, who ran to her room and opened the door. The bats burst through the opening and fled in the faces of the other 11 girls, who were gathered in the corridor.
