

For Hot Days

JUST the newest and loveliest things in millinery for the all too brief midsummer have been placed before the fascinated eyes of the devotee in outdoors and fashion. Black and white or the coolest of colors, lace and more lace, these are the paramount ideas that the modistes have put into triumph of execution. Nothing was ever imagined for the dog days, lovelier than the hat of white chip in which the contour of the brim is outlined with two rolled folds of black velvet placed on the under side. About the crown are set large roses made of fine princess lace and set in dark green foliage. These flowers of lace are exquisite. So far the lily and rose have been made and no other blossoms can be more beautiful than they. Wide Val edging for the roses and all-over patterns for the lilies are destined to be the favorite, but if one possesses a long purse or has some yards of old lace, please imagine the roses made of a duchess lace! The finest of silk covered wire has to be sewed in to hold the petals or simulated petals in place. For the roses, a wreath can be managed without cutting the lace but for lilies the petals must be shaped; unless each is made separately by a lacemaker. No one will be so foolish as to cut up fine hand made laces. Lilies, therefore, are destined to be made of the best machine made laces. But, as this season will not see the last of the lace flowers, it is worth while to make separate petals of remnant lace of other fine lace, for those who know how.

Numbers of hats in hair braid or hemp or fine chip are overlaid with wide chamois lace. Black over white chip or white over black, is all there is to tell. Plumes, pompons and alpacas finish them; these, too, in black or white.

The small drooping brim round hat continues the favorite for motoring and general wear when the matter of protection claims the first attention. Black and white striped ribbon and button roses, made of straw like that in the hat, leave nothing to be desired for such a model. In the picture the hat is of silver-blue straw, the flowers of the same, and a long adjustable veil of white chiffon is an accessory to be put on and off at pleasure.

LINEN DRESS

A simple semi-princess dress is shown here, that is a style especially suited to linen. The panel front that extends the whole length is attached to the sides by wide wrapped seams. The back is not a panel, but the bodice and skirt have slight fullness at waist. The turn-over collar and cuffs are of embroidered lawn.

Materials required: 6 yards 40 inches wide.

GLOVES MATCH THE COSTUME.

No More White Ones Are Worn, and Where They Seem Necessary Cream Color is Used.

No more white gloves! Gloves match the costume, or where they ought to be white, according to all social customs, they are cream. Suede slippers, too, match the costume, and the stockings with them are—flesh colored!

Vanity bags of gold clasp now like a fat purse. The meshed bags are no longer plain, but are in two metals—gold and gunmetal, or oxidized silver and copper—interwoven in a quaint pattern.

Tortoise-shell is made up into everything, from powder cases to umbrella handles; and there is a great deal of gunmetal and jet seen, owing to the king's death and the public mourning that Paris seems to have assumed with England.

For the same reason, orchids, real and artificial, are on view everywhere, since they were Edward's favorite flower.

Finally, wooden beads. The fad has become a craze, and wooden beads, in black and colors, are as thick as locusts during the plague in Egypt.

Embroidered Veils.

Nowadays, when veils are so heavily embroidered, the woman who is exact and delicate in her needlework can save herself a pretty penny by herself embroidering her plain net veils. The work must be done in the finest embroidery silk in a loose outline stitch, and great care must be taken not to tear the mesh of the veil. It is best to confine one's self to the simplest patterns—the new comet design, after our late visitor, is a good example—and to choose the large spriggy designs, so popular in any event, as the different figures will never approach the machine stitching in exactness; and this is less noticeable where there are few and far between.

Silk Fishnet.

If in your shopping tours you are fortunate enough to see a piece of silk fishnet, buy it.

The coarse mesh offers little covering, but such decoration, when used over a contrasting shade of supple material.

CUBS AND ATHLETICS PICKED TO PLAY THE WORLD'S CHAMPIONSHIP GAMES

Member of the Chicago Team Says Pittsburg Is the Club His Outfit Will Have to Beat—Confident Mack Will Take Honors Away From Hughie Jennings in the American League.

"It begins to look as if the Chicago Cubs and the Philadelphia Athletics are the teams that will be fighting for the world's championship the latter part of October," said a member of the Cub's team a few days ago.

"I'm not saying this because I happen to be drawing salary for playing with the Cubs, but it is my honest belief that we are going to cop the pennant in the National league and it is my opinion that Connie Mack's bunch is certain to land the rag in the American league.

"Can we beat the Athletics? I'm surprised that you should ask such a question. We can beat any team that ever played baseball. It's true the Sox trimmed us once, but that's a story that hasn't been fully told, so I'll not attempt to explain it. They couldn't do it again.

"The Detroit bunch will be lucky if it finishes in second place this year and that outfit known as the Boston Speed Boys is going to give the Athletics a run for their coin, but I feel sure that Connie Mack will land in front and the Chicago and Philadelphia fans will get to see the battle for world's championship honors.

"I know the race is by no means over and we have a lot of games to win, but with Reulbach, Overall and Brown back in condition we have a twirling staff that is second to none and the rest of the team is as good as any other. Some of the others have individual batters who lead us, but as a team they don't class.

"I'm looking for the Giants to blow up pretty soon and I believe it will be the Pirates who will be at our heels when the National league race is finished. The Pittsburg bunch seems to have shaken that slump and they can be expected to come fast from now on. Some say it was because of the failure of the club management to pay promised bonuses that the Pirates didn't play up to last season's form, but I don't believe it. Every team has its bad days and I think it was just a natural fall down that put the Pirates down in third place. I'll bet they beat New York out of second position. See if I'm not right. While I'm confident the Cubs will win anyway, I'd rather be playing against New York than against Fred Clarke's crew."

Hughie Jennings remarks that two seasons ago, when the Tigers started on their first eastern trip, they were absolutely in last place. They were 27 1/2 percentage points behind the Athletics. They were playing sandlot ball if sandlot ball was ever played. Quoting the manager: "I was almost in despair and I verily believe that the only reason I was not driven out of Detroit was that the fans were charitable enough to give me the credit for winning the pennant the year before. Well, sir, we started out on the road, and when we came back we had wiped out all but 16 of those awful 27 1/2 percentage points. We had played 26 games and had won 20 of them, and it wasn't long until we were at the top. You know the rest."

It is an odd fact that the baseball teams representing leading cities in the United States are seldom called by their proper names. When fans are talking baseball they rarely refer to John McGraw's great team as the New York Nationals, but affectionately cling to the time-honored name "Giants." This is the case practically all over the country, and the reason for it is interesting. With two ball teams in a major league city it is easier to distinguish between them by using nicknames than tacking on the name of the league which each represents. Hence we have the "Giants" representing the metropolis in the National league and the "Highlanders" or "Yankees" doing the same in the American league.

In the old days, say twenty years ago, the same practise prevailed, but not exactly for the same reason, as two clubs in a single city, barring Philadelphia, could not live. The New Yorks were first nicknamed the "Giants" in those days because the players were all big men. Buck Ewing, Tim Keefe, Roger Connor, Bill Brown, George Gore, Ed Crane, Jim O'Rourke and Mike Tiernan were six-footers and powerfully built. The Brooklyners were called the "Bridgemen" because a majority of them had just been married. The Chicagos, under Amos, were known as the "White Stockings" for the reason that they wore hose of that color, and the St. Louis Browns under the leadership of Comiskey were similarly named. So were the old Cincinnati Reds, while all the Boston teams were known popularly as the "Beaneaters."

The Clevelanders, with Pat Tebeau at the helm, were dubbed "The Spiders," as some of the players were slightly built, and had thin legs. The old Detroit champions were always called "The Wolverines," and the Pittsburg team bore the name of "Smoky City" and "Pirates" from time immemorial. The Washingtons were called everywhere as "The Senators," while in Quakertown the Phillies and the Athletics were the same old rivals. The Indianapolis team was nicknamed the Hoosiers, and the old Metropolitan of the American association were known familiarly as the "Nats."

Merkle Equals Eiberfeld's Feat. The feat of Merkle in scoring all three runs for the Giants the other day recalls what Kid Eiberfeld did once when with the Highlanders. He beat Rube Waddell by scoring all the runs and making all the hits in a game on the hilltop.

Says Cobb Is Incorrectly Scored. Secretary Richard of the St. Louis Browns says Detroit scorers are padding Ty Cobb's batting average. He says Cobb is not batting well, and that if scored correctly he would fall below 200.

Napoleon Lajoie.

Colonels, and in 1884 there was such a team as the St. Louis Maroons in the defunct Union association engineered by H. V. Lucas.

Nowadays we hear of the Boston Red Sox of the American league and the Boston Doves, named for their reputed owner, George B. Doves. The Brooklyners are staggering under the name Trolley Dodgers, and in Chicago we have the Cubs and White Sox. The Clevelanders have been nicknamed the Naps because the great Lajoie is their leader, while the Detroiters are known all over the land as the Tigers. In St. Louis the Browns and the Cardinals are rivals of patronage. The Washingtons have shaken the Senators for the Nationals, but the Cincinnati and Pittsburg still stick to the Reds and Pirates. This is the case with the Phillies and the Athletics in Philadelphia, too.

Some of the other nicknames are the Baltimore Orioles, the Jersey City Skeeters, the Newark Sailors, the Providence Clam Diggers, the Flour City of Rochester, the Buffalo Bisons, the Montreal Royals, the Milwaukee Brewers, the St. Paul Angels, the Kansas City Blues, the New Orleans Pelicans and others too numerous to mention.

When the last count was taken National league pitchers had struck out 1,549 batsmen and have given 1,556 bases on balls. These statistics have little comparison with the figures of strike-outs and walks in the American league. Up to the game time, there had been 1,991 of the former and 1,372 passes. Basing the ultimatum on the old ivy freescoed assumption that "figures don't lie," Ban Johnson's wheelers excel this season.

The race for that automobile prize which is to go to the best batter in either of the big leagues is growing hotter every day. Napoleon Lajoie has the lead in the American league according to the latest figures, but Ty Cobb is a close second. Lajoie on the Naps' eastern trip let down some in his hitting and was outbatted by three of the Boston players in the series there, but did not lose the lead. There is no cleaner hitter in baseball than Lajoie and he has gained the lead by smashing them out and strong. He is not what is known as a "clean-up" hitter like Cobb and some of the others, but just pegs away day by day getting his two, three and sometimes four hits regularly.

Manager Griffith has purchased Third Baseman Breen from the Vancouver club of the Northwestern league. He is said to be a fine hitter and a first-class fielder, and is strongly recommended by Joseph Sugden, the old catcher, who has been doing some scouting for the Reds out on the coast. Breen will not join the team until fall, after he gets through out there. Downey is doing so well at third base that he is not needed just at present.

IF GODS SAYS YOU MUST TAKE CHARGES TO WIN

DETROIT'S GREAT FIELDER DECLARES PLAYER WILL HELP HIS TEAM IF HE GRASPS EVERY OPPORTUNITY.

By TY COBB.

(Copyright, 1910, by Joseph B. Bowles.) Taking chances at all times, taking every reasonable chance, and some that do not seem even reasonable, is the way I think a player wins games. If he has speed, and courage, and confidence, and then takes the chances, seizes every opening and runs hard and slides harder, he will help his team win.

Sometimes it seems to me that one ball player is better than another, simply because he has more nervous energy and what we call "guts," than another. Nowadays the teams are so closely matched and the men so nearly equal in ability, that the team to win must have some method, or some skillful leader, and then something to keep it hustling and fighting all the time.

If this is meant for advice to young players, just tell them that they must hustle every minute, forget themselves and dig for runs. I know that when I get into a ball game all I think of is to win that game and get around the bases. I can't see or hear the crowd, and every opposing player is my enemy, no matter how good friends they may be off the ball field. I think that is the way a ball player must feel to win. He must forget himself, forget everything, and go after that game with every bit of strength and speed he has, not loafing a minute, and taking every chance possible. He must run out every ball he hits. As for batting, that is more or less natural ability and determination. A man may improve his hitting by steady practise, but I doubt whether a man can be taught to hit. I think the secret of hitting is not to be afraid of injury and not to "pull" at all. There are lots of batters who pull, that is, draw back slightly from the plate when the ball is pitched, and lose the force of their swing. In most cases these batters are as fearless as any others, but they pull unconsciously from nervousness. Steady practise may help overcome this nervousness, and help the hitting.

When a runner gets on bases he ought to have a definite plan of how he is going to get around, and signal the batter his intentions, but he must not allow that to keep him from taking any opening he sees, and he must be watching every instant for a ball passed ball, and be ready to change his plan in a fraction of a second. When I reach first I look around to see the positions of the outfielders, and watch the second baseman and shortstop to see which is going to take the throw. If an outfielder is out of position I want to know it, for I may decide to try to take two bases on a hit, or take two on anything he plays; gets a ball out of position to make a strong fast throw. A base runner ought to know exactly how opposing players throw, and the strength of their arms, for a runner may take a base on one man when he would not dare to start on another.

Above all things, young players ought to study the game, and the other players. One can learn a lot just by watching other players and studying their actions—and experience and knowledge of the other players helps. There is one more thing, always play square. I feel almost as badly when we win a game we don't deserve as when we are beaten. I don't mean that a player should not take every legitimate advantage, but that he should not take unfair advantage. The longer I play the more satisfaction there is in winning in a sportsman-like way. There is no satisfaction in winning by trickery, and a fellow who does some hot-headed trick regrets it. They do not pay. The other fellows are trying as hard and earnestly as you are.

ANNUAL LOSS IS ENORMOUS

Two Hundred Million Dollars a Year Might Be Added to Wealth of Country.

Computing that there are in the United States at least 300,000 indigent consumptives who should be cared for in charitable or semi-charitable sanatoria and hospitals, the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis estimates that the annual cost to the country for the treatment of these persons would be $50,000,000 at the rate of $1,669 per day per patient. At the lowest possible estimate the country loses $200,000,000 a year from the incapacity of these indigent victims of tuberculosis. This would mean a net saving of $150,000,000 a year to the United States if all victims of consumption who are too poor to afford proper treatment in expensive sanatoria were cared for at the expense of the municipality, county or state. And this annual gain does not include the enormous saving that would accrue from the lessened infection due to the segregation of the dangerous consumptives in institutions.

Troubles of Married Life

Succession of Incidents That Made a Comedy of a Philadelphia Couple's Nuptial Day.

Amusing incidents following one another in rapid succession, converting a marriage into a comedy, a wedding reception into a vaudeville performance, happened recently on the nuptial day of a young pair in the northern part of the city.

The first incident occurred while the bride was hastily donning her trousseau preparatory to being whisked to the church in a carriage. The carriage happened to be a buggy, to which was attached a crippled, half-starved and hardly able to stand upon its legs.

The pair descended the steps of the house, passed under the canopy and a shower of rice and various other articles. When they saw the vehicle in waiting the pair returned to the house and ordered another. More than an hour elapsed before a carriage could be obtained.

When the happy but unfortunate pair arrived at the church they found, to their amazement, that the main item on the day's program would be delayed through the absence of the clergyman.

After half an hour's wait, during which they wasted both their patience and time, the two were married.
