

The KITCHEN CABINET

I'll live in a mirror of king and slave. The part that we are and do. Then give to the world the best you can. And the rest will come back to you.

WHAT is life but what a man is thinking of all day. —Emerson. Make the world within our reach. Somewhat the better for our living. And gladder for our human speech. —J. G. Whittier.

Hints for the Housekeeper.
Many women prefer to write off valuable recipes rather than use a good book back to the kitchen. When this is too much trouble, have a pane of glass cut to fit the size of the open book, bind the edge with the binding use in paste paraffin and always have it handy when using the book, as it serves two purposes, keeps the book open and clean from the splatters in cooking.

Put a canner add a sliced green pepper to scrambled eggs with a few mushrooms. Watery custard or a custard that weeps, is caused from cooking in too hot an oven or too long in cooking. Set the dish in hot water and never allow the custard to boil.

A cupful of ripe olives added to a beef stew makes an elegant dish out of a common one.

The tomato juice instead of water in the omelet.

Checking pots and pans is the hallmark of the cook. It is hard work if left until after the dishes are washed and hangs over one as a burden. One way way is to keep a supply of newspapers in the kitchen and as soon as a greasy dish is emptied wipe it out with the paper and wash it as soon as possible. The paper may be burned and so the grease is kept from the cloth and sink.

A dish which is a great favorite with many is codfish served in a white sauce made of sour cream instead of cream. It makes a pleasing change.

Some one says that sour cream is good to mashed potatoes. It is worth trying.

For a plant stimulant use a few crystals of iron sulphate dropped into the watering can once a week. This chemical being a combination of iron, sulphur and oxygen, acts as a tonic to the plants tissues.

To clean kid gloves with little trouble and expense try this method: Saturate a bit of clean muslin with camellia and shake it out until it is no longer wet. With the glove on, wipe gently from finger tips to wrist. Hang the gloves in the air for a few hours to air thoroughly.

Rice, oatmeal or other cereals left over from breakfast make delicious puddings. Take equal parts of the leftover and flour, add a little sugar, salt and one or two eggs and enough milk to make a heavy batter. Bake in fat hot until brown. These little cakes make a nice dessert when served with jelly.

ALL SORTS OF HINTS.
A good umbrella with proper care will last for years. Never roll it up until it is well dried in the folds. When a wet umbrella is left to drip in the rack, always turn it handle end down, as the water settles in the top and if not soon dried will rot the silk.

It is strangely true that those who have the fewest clothes are they who take the least care of them. It is not wear that makes a drabbed mass of your best gown in a few months. It is lack of care when not worn.

It is better to fold and put away a gown will wear less its freshness. A best way to hang waists and skirts is on coat hangers; these may be made of barrel hoops if the household ones are unsatisfactory. Women who wear their clothes well put them on carefully and take the starch and brush often to their garments are always well dressed. It is an economy to have two or more pairs of shoes to wear, as leather, like people, need rest to wear long. If the feet perspire the leather softens quickly unless aired and changed often. Sprinkle a little powder in the shoes or burn alum in a good remedy for that trouble.

Use the best dressing or blacking possible, but do not slight the brush. Did you ever get a little shock on seeing the backs of muddy heels on an otherwise well dressed woman? When the heels wear out unevenly as they do with so many of us, have the shoemaker put on another lift and straighten them. An authority on such matters says that many lifts that women are prone to are caused from wearing run-over heels which keep the body out of plumb.

When putting away shoes for a season of a week, stuff them to keep them in shape if you cannot afford a few shoe trees.

Rough braids on the skirts wear shoes in a very short time.

When shoes get wet let them dry naturally away from the fire, then rub with a little sweet oil and they will be as good as ever. Shoes should be aired as well as clothing and often. Put them in the window at night to air.

Things Will Take a Turn.

There is a power in the direct glance of a sincere and loving human soul which will do more to dissipate prejudice and kindle charity than the most elaborate arguments.

Culinary Suggestions.
Mashed potatoes are such a common accompaniment for roast poultry or broiled steak that it seems surprising that so few cooks serve them properly. When boiled in rapidly boiling water with a tablespoonful of salt to a quart of water they should when cooked fall into a snowy mass at the first blow of the masher. After draining them remove the cover and shake over fire to remove all moisture, then mash until smooth, adding the cream or milk heated, then the butter and salt. Pile the potatoes into a hot dish; but do not put down, that makes them heavy. Potatoes mashed and served in this manner are a strong contrast to the ordinary mashed potatoes as served.

Many people like cooked cucumbers, for those a few suggestions may be welcome. When they get a little too coarse of seed to serve sliced, pare and slice in lengthwise quarters, scrape out all the seeds and cook them in slightly salted boiling water until they are tender, then drain, butter them, season with salt and pepper and serve on narrow lengths of toast well buttered.

Fried cucumbers are very appetizing for a breakfast dish. Prepare them as above except in the manner of slicing leave them in half-inch slices. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, roll in cracker crumbs and fry quickly on both sides in hot bacon fat. These are delicious served with a cheese omelet.

Here are some new cutups, at least new to some:

Pear Cutsup.
Add two tablespoonfuls of stick cinnamon, two teaspoonfuls each of cloves and mace to three cupsful of water and simmer 15 minutes; pare, halve and core a dozen rich, late pears, lay in a baking dish and pour the spiced water over them, cover closely and bake until the fruit is tender, but not soft, and skim out. Return the syrup to the fire, and simmer until reduced to one pint, strain, tie the spices in bags (strong vinegar and three pounds of sugar to the hot liquid add the pears, a few at a time. Skim out into quart jars with spices bag in each, and when all are cooked, pour the pickle over and seal hot. These should more correctly be called spiced pears.

Apple Cakes.

A Child's Birthday Party.
A children's party is not always an easy one to arrange; but the pleasure it gives the little people more than repays one for all the trouble. Of course, there must be ice cream; it would be no party without it.

A simple plain, not too rich or served with a sauce. If one can afford something a little elaborate, it is nice to serve the cream in spun sugar nests. These may be bought or made at home and add an elegance to the dish of cream which is a delight to a child. Very pretty little cakes may be prepared by using the angel food recipe and piping the mixture through a posty tube on to the baking sheets in any desired form, then bake a delicate brown.

Next to cake in importance to the palate of the child is the sandwich. They are sure to like sandwiches. Sweet ones may even take the place of cake. Home-made bon-bons are always a treat and are much more wholesome than the kind bought at the confectioner's.

A great variety of them may be made with the fondant, flavored. They may be dipped in melted fondant, flavored and colored.

To make the fondant, boil two and one-half pounds of sugar and a cupful of water, a half teaspoonful of cream of tartar, without stirring, until it forms a soft waxy ball in water. Turn out on a marble slab or large platter and when cool work with a wooden spoon until creamy. Put it into a bowl, and let it stand covered for a day to ripen. It is then ready to make into any desired candy.

The charm of the party will not be fully appreciated until the birthday cake appears, brightened by its rosy candied.

A board that may be kept for years and serve for any number of birthdays may be made from the top of a candy roll. Bore holes not quite through, but deep enough to hold a small candle upright, leaving the center for the plate with the cake. This board may do for the great-grandmother's birthday cake as well, for the candles tell the story of the years.

"If I buy a seat in the stock exchange will you agree to go to work?" "I ain't crazy for work, dad. Make it a seat in the senate."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

WHO'S WHO AND WHY

ONE OF THE "OLD GUARD"

One of the surprises of the recent primary election in Michigan was the defeat of Julius Caesar Burrows for renomination to the United States senate. Senator Burrows has been a long time in politics and was one of the "old guard," being associated with Aldrich, Hale and the Senator Allison in running the upper branch of congress. He entered congress in 1873 and has been a member of the senate since 1895.

Senator Burrows was born in Erie county, Pa., in 1837. He went west at an early age and read law while living in the western reserve of Ohio. In his early twenties he removed to Kalamazoo and has since been a resident of Michigan. He has practiced little at the bar, having been in politics ever since he returned home from two years of service in the civil war, with the First Michigan regiment. It is recalled by the old inhabitants of Kalamazoo that Mr. Burrows made a successful prosecuting attorney in the two years he held the office immediately after the war.

As his reputation as a debater and speaker grew, Mr. Burrows gained political power, and at the close of his term as prosecuting attorney was appointed supervisor of Internal revenue for Michigan and Wisconsin, but declined the office. In 1873 the opportunity came that he wanted in the form of his first nomination to congress.

In the house of representatives Mr. Burrows rose slowly. He was not a leader and he was not given membership in the most important committees until late in his career, but he early attained a reputation for being an excellent parliamentarian and good presiding officer.

As a senator Mr. Burrows has been conspicuous chiefly as an opponent to Reed Smoot, the Utah senator accused of Mormonism, and as an opponent to tariff changes that were said to be against the interest of the Michigan beet sugar growers. Senator Burrows was temporary chairman of the Republican National convention at Chicago and delivered the keynote speech of the campaign which followed and which placed President Taft in the White House. The defeat of Burrows by the insurgents is thus an event of national importance.

Senator Burrows is chairman of the senate committee appointed to investigate the charges against Senator Lorimer.

'BUTCHER' WRITES A BOOK

With an unpardonable lack of tact or a sinister sense of humor Gen. Valeriano Weyler has allowed the publisher to print the title of his sensational book "Mi Mando in Cuba" ("My Command in Cuba") in letters of gray scariest on a paper cover of livid gray.

Whatever the motive may have been that prompted such a choice, that bloody "eye catcher" of a line finely symbolizes the man and his work. Weyler has been on trial before public opinion for butchering his enemies instead of fighting them; and he flaunts in our faces the ugly stunts that show where he wiped off his knife.

Captain general of the most fertile province of Spain (and a province which more than once manifested her intention to throw off the Bourbon yoke), he makes such a case against the country that buys his services as no citizen of the United States could have ever made to justify America's attitude in the Cuban mix-up.

Weyler was the best hated man in Cuba when the government of this nation finally recalled him. This book will cause him to be cursed the length and breadth of the peninsula.

I wrote it, he says, "to give all the facts about my conduct as general-in-chief, a conduct admitted not only by army officers, high and low, who wrote me innumerable letters, but by privates, who, on their return to the peninsula, spoke of me with an enthusiastic fervor for which I can never thank them enough. Various reasons prevented me from doing years ago (when I could not have freed my mind from a certain bias) a work which I can now do in perfect peace of mind, thanks to the time that has passed, and which has soothed the irritation due to the injustice I suffered at the hands of some of my men."

Furthermore, I did not wish to sadden Senor Sagasta by retelling the story of our colonial disasters; neither did I feel any pleasure in censuring the illustrious General Martinez Campos, my predecessor in Cuba, however uncharitably he acted toward me after his return to the capital.

A perusal of the book falls to prove that Weyler kept his promise to treat the subject with perfect moderation.

A POPULAR ENGLISH PRIEST

One of the best known priests in attendance at the Eucharistic congress at Montreal was Rev. Father Bernard Vaughan of London, England, whose denunciation of the smart set has deeply stirred the world's metropolis. Everybody in London loves and honors Father Vaughan, yet he is the pupil scourge of the town. He preaches truths that terrify, yet an hour before he speaks the seats in the church are jammed and crowds line the walls.

He is as well known on the continent as in Great Britain, and although he has become ultra-famous because of his lecturing and speaking, still he finds time to devote many hours a day to ministrations among the poor.

At the Montreal conference Father Vaughan created a sensation by his denunciation of race suicide. "We are living in a day," he said, "of headlines, snapshots, taxicabs and music halls; in a day when the scramble for the prizes of life has become a mad passion. It is a day of fever, fret and fume. Competition for earthen toys is so keen and the margin of profit in commerce has become so fine that the one cry beating through the air is 'burry up.' We are living in a day when the high ideals of old are fast yielding to the pressure of creature comforts, when principle is being exchanged for expediency; in a day when the Christian sense of sin is being regarded as a bygone superstition; in a day when it matters not what you believe, but only what you do, and when you may do what you like, provided you are not found out; in a day when the relations between the sexes take one back to pagan times; in a day when there is no empty place but in a cradle, not room in which to move but in the churches."

Father Vaughan is a brother of the late Cardinal Vaughan of England, and is sixty-three years old.

DEVOTES LIFE TO THE POOR

The Grand Duchess Elizabeth, widow of the Grand Duke Sergius of Russia, is regarded as an angel of mercy by the poor of Moscow, among whom she labors unceasingly. The grand duchess is a German princess by birth, a sister of the reigning grand duke of Hesse and also of the Czarina. Her husband was assassinated upon the streets of Moscow on February 17, 1905, being shattered by a bomb thrown at him. He was killed within a stone's throw of the palace and his wife, hearing the report, rushed to the spot and fell fainting upon Sergius' mutilated corpse.

After that terrible experience the grand duchess withdrew from all the gayeties of life and set to work to ameliorate the sufferings of the poor in her adopted country. She has founded hospitals and nursing homes. She herself directs operations and devotes eight to ten hours a day to the laborious work of superintending the different branches of her charitable activity. She devotes virtually the whole of her vast income, amounting to about $625,000, to the cause of charity, and the suffering of the poor in and around Moscow and in the vicinity of several of her estates in other parts of Russia have learned to regard her as a living saint. Not content with directing operations, she also participates in the active work of her various institutions.

Sometimes she works as a nurse, sometimes as a visitor to the poor, sometimes she attends as a domestic servant the destitute harbored in her refuges for aged paupers. On such occasions she dons the dress of a nurse or servant and performs the necessary duties without revealing her identity to the inmates of the different homes. In many cases the other nurses or members of the staff have been unaware of her identity, so that in this way she has convinced herself of the inner workings of the institutions and has revealed breaches of discipline and good conduct on the part of the staffs, especially with regard to the treatment of the patients.

NOT CUT OUT FOR SOLDIER

Widow Healy indulges in Some Plain Speaking to Her Devoted but Timid Lover.

The courting of the Widow Healy by Terence Corcoran was a tedious affair to every one in Magray place, most of all to the widow herself, who tried various expedients to assist her timid admirer.

"I'm thinking I might go for a sojer," Terence announced one night, when his fancy had been stirred by a newspaper account of a military pageant. "I'm not so old but I could do it. I was wanst in a school regiment."

"You go for a sojer!" cried the Widow Healy in mingled scorn and alarm. "A man that calls on a lone widow for two years and more, wid-out pluck enough to spake his mind, hasn't the makings of a drummer boy in him."

BABY'S SKIN TORTURE

"When our baby was seven weeks old he broke out with what we thought was heat, but which gradually grew worse. We called in a doctor. He said it was eczema and from that time we doctored six months with three of the best doctors in Atchison but he only got worse. His face, head and hands were a solid sore. There was no end to the suffering for him. We had to tie his little hands to keep him from scratching. He never knew what it was to sleep well from the time he took the disease until he was cured. He kept us awake all hours of the night and his health wasn't what you would call good. We tried everything but the right thing. "Finally I got a set of the Cuticura Remedies and I am pleased to say we did not use all of them until he was cured. We have waited a year and a half to see if it would return but it never has and to-day his skin is clear and fair as it possibly could be. I hope Cuticura may save some one else's little ones suffering and also their pocket-books. John Leason, 1405 Atchison St., Atchison, Kan., Oct. 15, 1909."

His First Lesson in Economy.
"When I was a very small boy and a dime looked pretty big to me, I met John H. Farley—who had always been my good friend—from the street one June day," says Frank Harris.

"Frank," he said, "the Fourth of July is coming soon. You'll want some change then. Let me be your banker until then and you'll have some money for firecrackers, torpedoes, lemonade and peanuts."

"I emptied my pockets into his hand every day thereafter until the Fourth I turned over to him my small earnings. When the day of days came around I had a fund that enabled me to celebrate in proper style, while many of my playmates were flat broke. It was my first lesson in thrift and it was a good one. Hundreds of Cleveland people would be glad today to testify to the fact that when John H. Farley was a friend of a man or a boy he was a friend indeed."—Cleveland Leader.

Now They Sleep Inside.
George H. Beattie, jeweler in the old Arcade, and L. E. Ralston, auditor of the News, have jointly and severally decided that sleeping out in the open isn't all that it has been declared to be, says the Cleveland Leader. They were both in a deep snooze out at the Beattie farm, near Chagrin Falls, the other night, when a runaway team from the county fair city turned into the lane leading up to the Beattie estate and came along at full speed.

Sound asleep, but dreaming of impending danger, Ralston rolled out of his cot toward the north, and Beattie from his cot toward the south. The runaway horses dashed between the sleepers, oversetting everything in the way, but missing Beattie and Ralston by margins too narrow to be measured. Since that night Ralston has slept in his town house and Beattie has found shelter under the ample roof of his house on his big plantation.
