GREAT HEAT OF METEORS.

Some Have Fallen as Molten Masse: From a Volcano's Crater.

Ordinarily the meteors that flast across the sky at stated periods o time burn themselves out in the up per air, but occasionally a meteoric mass lasts long enough to reach the earth. One fell on May 15, 1900, a: Felix, Ala. Metcors were seen on the occasion referred to and sundry ex plosions were heard, while later on a mass of meteoric substance weighing seven pounds was discovered imbedded in soft soil. This meteorite was analyzed and found to be built up of such minerals as olivine, augite, triolite, nickel iron and graphite carbon.

The dark color of the Felix stone is stated to be due to the presence in fair amount of the last-named substance. The interest attaching to meteorites, of course, centers around the fact that they enable us to obtain glimpses of the composition of other worlds than ours. Astronomy is well agreed on the unity of chemical composition which marks the orbs, and even the simple fact that it is hydrogen gas which blazes in the sun and gives us our light and heat is a testimony to this fact. Meteoric iron and carbon similarly display links between these erratic bodies and our own earth.

GREAT SALT LAKE RECEDING.

Fall of the Level Since 1894' Amounts to Nearly Six Feet.

Great Salt Lake, in Utah, which for several years has been slowly but steadily receding, has, according to Director Murdock of the United States weather bureau, now reached the lowest level recorded since observations have been taken by the department. Up to Aug. 1 the lowest mark ever recorded was on July 11. Since that time the lake has receded four inches. The fall of the water since 1894 amounts to nearly six feet, and on the low, flat eastern shore this has resulted in a recession of the water line during that time of fully threequarters of a mile. Speaking of this phenomenon Director Murdock said:

"Utah has been in a dry cycle for seventeen or eighteen years. In this period the precipitation has been much below the average. Precipitation sometimes moves in cycles of this kind and duration, and I think a prolonged period of increased precipitation is nearly due. But it will take several years to bring the lake back

Would Protect the Whisky.

General De Wet is possessed of humor. One of the leading officials in a refugee camp is a Scotsman, who during dinner took occasion in offering the general a dink to say he must have got a fair amount of whisky among his captured convoys. De Wet was much amused at this, and said that before attacking a convoy he made inquiries if they were guarded by Scotsmen. If this were so, he further inquired if it contained any whisky. If the second condition accompanied the first, he always gave the colony a wide berth, because he knew the beggars would fight to the last man.

One of the Oldest Families.

One of the oldest families in England is the Wake family of Courteenhall, Northamptonshire, which for nine centuries has had as its head a Hereward Wake, in clear descent from father to son. Every male child receives as one of his names the famous cognomen Hereward, the family tracing its ancestry back to "Hereward the Wake," whom Charles Kingsley named "the last of the Saxons." The head of the family today is Sir Hereward Wake, whose eldest son won the D. S O. on Lord Roberts' taff in South Africa.

What an Almanac Did.

Matthews, Ark., Aug. 25th .- Mrs. Lee S. Sanders of this place tells how an almanac saved her life.

"I have been troubled a great deal with my kidneys all my life and was constantly growing worse.

"I chanced to get a copy of Dodd's Almanac for 1902 and in it read some stories of how Dodd's Kidney Pills had cured many very bad cases of Kidney Trouble.

"My husband bought a box and I began to use them and in a short time we were surprised and delighted at the wonderful improvement in my case.

"I am now as well as anybody and I can not say too much for Dodd's Kidney Pills. It was a lucky day for

The increase of the death rate occurs, probably, for the reason that food is scarcer and also because at a time when a country is engaged in a disastrous war, the minds of its inhabitants are adversely affected Those who are in delicate Lealth, or who are attacked with sickness, succumb much more readily when the spirits are low than when in a normal condition.
