L. A. Williams, the republican nominee for sheriff is a man of ability and experience. He was city marshal at Loup City for several years, when the town was over run during the boom, with transient thugs and lawless characters. Mr. Williams at that time performed his duties well and was always found ready to act when his services was most needed to preserve peace. Very few, there are, who are acquainted with Mr. Williams and his official work as city marshal who will not support him for sheriff.

The populist papers are very fond of quoting from the Nebraska Independent, but when that paper openly declares in a long article right after the holding of the populist state convention that the party had busted and that there would be no more populist party in Nebraska, they studiously avoided reproducing the article, and when it is brought to the public attention by the republican press simply refer to it as a "slop over." It may be a "slop over," but it is not the kind of slop that the pop editors relish. They evidently would rather go off with the democratic party and reestablish the soup house industry. Soup is better than slop any way.

The Times-Independent tries to dodge the fact that the populist party solemnly declared in its platform that it was opposed to a third term, by saying "the convention that nominated Mr. Angier declared by its vote, that it did believe in giving him a third term." Now the fact that Mr. Angier was nominated for a third term is no crime, or in anyway reflects against him as an officer or candidate, but the populist leaders and stump speakers did, as everybody knows, in former years, make their most bitter campaign against the third term policy. Their attitude now on this particular issue reminds us of one of the old sayings of "whipping the devil around the stump."

The Peru Pointer had the following item in its columns last week: Hon. T. J. Mojors was quite severely bitten by a dog at his home on Sunday morning. The dog belonged to Mrs. Glasgow, who lived near the Majors' residence and it seems that it had formed a very strong friendship for a pony on the place and whenever anyone would attempt to abuse the pony in any way the dog would become very fierce in its defense. The pony had wandered into Mr. Majors, yard and in driving it out he aroused the dog's anger and had to defend himself to keep from being bitten. The dog went off home and Majors went into his grape patch and while there the dog returned and in spite of his efforts to keep the animal off, it bit him three times, inflicting a very severe wound which bled quite freely. A doctor was summoned to dress the wound which at present is doing nicely.
