NELLIE GRANT WEDS AGAIN

The marriage recently of Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris to Frank H. Jones, a Chicago banker, was in sharp contrast to her first marriage, 38 years ago, to Algernon J. Sartoris, an English army officer.

Nellie Grant was then the idol of the nation and her marriage took place in the east room of the White House while her distinguished father was president. It was one of the greatest social events the White House had seen up to that time, or perhaps since. Simple, amiable and unaffected. Nellie Grant, the only daughter of General Grant, had endeared herself to the American people and she went with her husband to their English home accompanied by the heartiest good wishes.

In England she was presented to Queen Victoria and dined at Windsor Castle. Yet her life in England proved most unhappy. Her husband treated her with injustice and cruelty, so much so that her father-in-law's sympathy was aroused in her behalf and he made earnest efforts to effect a restoration of good feeling between husband and wife. Failing in this, he gave her a small London house in Cadogan place, forced his son to give her a country home near Hampton and settled a handsome income upon her. Upon his death, in 1890, he left her the town house in which she had lived after her separation from her husband and also set tled upon her $35,000 a year.

Three years after the death of the elder Sartoris her husband died and Mrs. Sartorirs received the principal of his income, as guardian of her children, and the lease of the country house.

Some years ago Mrs. Sartoris returned to this country and lived with her mother until the latter's death. In 1901 she bought a magnificent residence at Cobourg, Canada, and has since divided her time between her Canadian home and Washington.

Her second husband is a wealthy and highly esteemed resident of Chicago and served as assistant postmaster general under the late President Cleveland.

BIDDLE'S UNIQUE METHODS

It is a far cry from prize fighting to religion. At first blush it seems most sacrilegious to associate the two subjects. But it has been done successfully not only in words but in deeds, and, as results have proven. it is the basis of one of the most remarkable religious movements this The man back of this novel idea for furthering the cause of Christianity is Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, millionaire, of Philadelphia, Pa., who but a few years back became famous as an amateur boxer and an object of criticism and source of disgust to the ultra-exclusive set of the Quaker City of which he is a member. But withal, "Tony" Biddle proved himself a practical pugilist-one who loved the manly art only for the manliness which it brought out; one who stood for honesty and high ideals and who was ever

When Mr. Biddle conceived the idea of his Bible class movement, his secret motive—if such it may be called was to introduce athletics as an inducement to young men, and when he took charge of his first class in the Sunday school of Holy Trinity Protestant Episcopal church, Philadelphia, four years ago, he had but three members, and the attendance of the school was very slim at the time.

So rapidly has the Drexel Biddle Bible class grown that it now numbers 700 members, and it is the ambition of the originator to make it of national scope. With this object in view, Mr. Biddle began to branch out to other churches in the Quaker City and to churches in other cities, with the rest that there are now 45 classes in Philadelphia under his direction, with an attendance of 3,000 men and 300 women (the inclusion of women being of recent origin, thus accounting for their small representation), while classes have also been formed in churches in Holmesburg, Tacony, Conshohocken, Norristown, Harrisburg, Danville and Plymouth, Pa.; Wilmington, Del.; Camden, N. J.; Tarrytown, N. Y.; Providence, R. I., and Manton, R. I.
