To Northwestern Subscribers

We desire to call our readers' attention to the new ruling of the postal department which does not permit publishers of newspapers to longer mail copies of the publication to subscribers who are in arrears more than one year. This means that unless we can get immediate settlement from subscribers who are thus in arrears we will be compelled to pay the regular rate of postage on all such papers sent out. Of course no newspaper can afford to do this, and we take this means of notifying our readers of this new requirement.

The postal department has called upon us for a statement of our books with this issue, as it has upon all other papers in the country. The Northwestern, like many other papers, has extended credit to its readers and has seldom sent out statements of account, because our readers have been of the kind who always pay when their attention is called to the matter. Now, the government has intervened with all newspapers, and requires the collection of these accounts more than one year old. With this explanation, we ask all of those who know themselves to be indebted to arrange for payment. We cannot in a short time see all of you, and it means a great amount of work to prepare and mail statements to so many. However, we will, as fast as possible, send statements to those who do not respond to this notice. Our readers have been uniformly prompt in paying their accounts, and we have not the slightest complaint to make, but we are compelled to obey the mandate of Uncle Sam. Thanking you in advance, we are,

Very respectfully,
J. W. BURLEIGH

The Youth's Companion appeals to every interest of family life, from housekeeping to athletics. It begins with stories of youthful vim and vigor, with articles which disclose the secrets of successful play in the games, with charming tales of life at the girls' colleges. But The Companion does not surrender these readers when they have entered the more serious paths of life. Mothers will welcome the page for little children and the weekly doctor's article. Fathers will find the important news of the day as it is, and not as it is rumored to be. The entire household will appreciate the sketches with touch gently on common follies or caricature eccentricity. In short, for less than four cents a week The Companion brings into the home clean entertainments, pure inspiration, fine ideas, increase of knowledge.

Names rarely seen in table of contents will be found in The Companion's Announcement for 1913, which will be sent upon request—with samples of the paper, to those not familiar with it.

Every new subscriber for 1913 will receive free all the issues for the remaining weeks of 1912; also, free The Companion Window Transparency and Calendar for 1913, in rich, translucent colors—the most beautiful of all Companion souvenirs.

S. R. McKelvie For Lieutenant Governor

This year brings to the voters of Nebraska their first opportunity to vote for a native Nebraskan for the important office of lieutenant governor. S. R. McKelvie was born on a farm in Clay county and lived there upon the farm until of age. His father, Sam McKelvie, is a Nebraska pioneer and the oldest breeder of Poland China hogs in this state. Upon leaving the farm S. R. McKelvie took up work in the field of farm paper journalism. His rise to success was rapid, and he is today publisher of The Nebraska Farmer, the oldest farm paper in the west, established in 1859 by Robert W. Furnas. That publication is regarded throughout the state as extremely fearless and efficient in its championing of the farming interests in Nebraska. In public life Mr. McKelvie is the kind and character of young man who is rapidly forging to the fore. He served one term in the city council of Lincoln and is now a member of the state legislature from Lancaster county. In the last session of that body he worked earnestly and zealously in the interests of the initiative and referendum, the stock yards bill and other measures which gave him the stamp of a thorough progressive. The only measures which he introduced were of a non-partisan character and related to agriculture.
