Monday was St. Patrick's Day. Did you get onto Pete's brogans since?

Mrs. A. C. Evans left this morning to join her husband at Goodland, Kas. May good luck follow them.

The Junior Bible Class of the M. E. church held their annual St. Patrick's Day banquet in the class parlors last Monday evening. About thirty members were present, and a most delightful time is reported.

Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Douglas came up from Aurora last week Thursday, remaining till Monday for a visit with A. M. Lewis and family. The ladies are sisters. The visit was made of especial importance because of the arrival of that bouncing baby boy at the home of Ed Lewis.

J. H. Burwell for Supt. City Schools

The school board met at the office of J. S. Pedler Monday night and after full discussion of the merits of the less than half hundred applications for the position of superintendent of our city schools, unanimously focussed their consent upon the application of Prof. J. H. Burwell, who is principal of the Rockville schools. It was surprising the number of applications which had poured in on the devoted heads of the honorable board, the secretary having a small armload of letters showing up the unquestionable ability of the applicants, which were carefully compiled, examined, sifted and then disposed of. Prof. Burwell is a most successful and widely known teacher in the state, who has been in the work for perhaps twenty or more years, has a widely diversified experience in the school room and is at once intimately interested in Sherman county educational matters from a financial standpoint as well as that of an educator, owning landed interests and a home here, having a fine farm a few miles south of this city. We believe the board has acted most wisely in the selection of Prof. J. H. Burwell as superintendent of our city schools for the coming school year. The hour being late when the action upon superintendent was taken, the board adjourned till this week Saturday evening to continue their work of selecting the balance of the corps of teachers.

Male Medicos Next on Nerve

No one doubts the nerve of our medical men to answer calls in all sorts of weather, and at all times o'night but it devolved upon our new woman medico, Dr. Carrie L. Bowman, to show them that the male gender have not all the grit going. Last Friday morning, about 3 o'clock, when the big blizzard was just in the height of its fury, a hurry phone call came to Dr. Carrie to visit a patient about half way to Rockville. In spite of the protestations of her partner in the joys and sorrows of life as well as in medics, that he would make the trip in her stead, and that she must not attempt to answer said call, she ordered the liverman to take her to the bedside of the sick. They started all right, but when about three miles from town they were obliged to abandon the team and trudged down the railroad track on foot, reaching their destination some four miles further without serious mishap, other than total physical exhaustion. We speak of this to emphasize the fact that man is a tyro, when compared to woman in any walk of life, and we don't care a whoop who knows we say and think so.

NOT HARD TO STOP HAZING

Good Results Have Followed Determined Purpose to Put an End to College Foolishness.

Hazing, which used to be rampant at West Point and Annapolis, has been pretty well suppressed through the energy with which it has been combated by the federal authorities. Under the urgings of the Inquirer and other newspapers, which detested and denounced a brutal practice, congress enacted legislation whose loyal and energetic enforcement has served to stamp the evil out. An instance of it is reported once in a while, but usually in a materially modified and comparatively unobjectionable form, and the convicted offender is punished without any demoralizing indulgence. This is a gratifying reform for whose consummation President Taft deserves a large measure of credit.

At other than the two colleges conducted by the government hazing continues to a greater or less extent, and within the past few days cases have been reported in which one young man died from the effects of his comrades' ill-treatment, while another youth was so seriously injured that his life is endangered. This indicates an unsatisfactory situation. It shows the continued existence of an evil which needs to be eradicated and demonstrates the necessity for some remedial action sufficiently drastic to be effectively restrictive and admonitory. Would-be hazers must be frightened into good behavior.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Hansen's Bail Fixed at $700

A. L. Baillie Likes Oregon

In a letter recently received from our old friend, A. L. Baillie, at Clackamas, Oregon, in which he writes for more Northwestern reading, he has this to say: "We are nicely situated here and very comfortably surrounded, with beautiful scenery and the most agreeable neighbors, but yet, for all that, there still remains a lingering, unquenchable fascination, a feeling that one cannot do, for old friends and haunts. Such feelings as I have described makes your paper always doubly welcome. Mrs. Baillie joins with me in sending best regards to yourself and all old friends."

Hiked Home in Friday's Fury

Remember last week Friday? We'll wager one bunch of good fellows will remember it for many a day. We refer to Henry Ojendyk and his hiking companions who were here as witnesses in district court last week, and the trains not running and no auto, team or other mode of conveyance being rentable, purchasable, hireable, nor gettable, and wanting to get to Ashton, concluded to hot-foot it in the afternoon for home and fireside. In fact, however, their nerve was no more in evidence than their ability, as a wireless from Ashton stated the boys got over the ten miles of territory on tie-tickets by 9 o'clock that evening, leaving here just after dinner. It is said they side-tracked at Schaupps for a time to coal, water and oil up, but made fair schedule time the entire distance.

If it isn't right, Schwaner, the Jeweler, will make it right. See him for all repair work in the jewelry line.

Will Peterson writes of His Minnesota Home

Brooks, Minn., March 10, 1913.
Editor Northwestern:
Dear Sir—Neither George nor myself have as yet received any copies of the Northwestern and we believe that we are still subscribers. Our address is Brooks, Minnesota.
We arrived here with our three cars and were fortunate enough to have our new neighbors come in with their bob-sleds and help us move into our new homes. In spite of the snow, this country looks good to us. There are more immigrants arriving. Six families arrived week before last, coming here with their household goods and horses from Illinois and Iowa. We do not know how many arrived last week. One fine thing we have discovered here is the water. George says it is the first time in several years that he has not been troubled with a pain in his back, and he believes it is the good water. In fact he felt so fine over it that he threw his cane into the top of a Northern Birch tree. Of course we can not say any thing as yet about crops, but some of our neighbors report big yields. We have been very busy moving and fixing up but have enjoyed the newness of it all. We find many things much cheaper here; as for instance, lumber, hard coal and many other things. Our families arrived here and looked eagerly at every thing surrounding their new homes, and like it much better than they thought they would. George's boy, Vern, started to school this morning. He has not quite half a mile to go, where there is a nice looking, good sized school house with a bell on it, which can be heard for quite a distance. Fuel is cheaper here. There are plenty of groves, and it costs very little to keep warm. Trusting that we receive the Northwestern, I remain,
Very truly yours,
W. S. PETERSON.

Healthy Clothes

DON'T suppose you ever gave it a thought that some clothes were healthier than others. It's true though and especially on boys' clothes. Most boys' clothes are sold for so low a price that some manufacturers make them in sweat shops, by foreign labor, a great many of whom live and work under disease spreading conditions. These garments are easily breathed and transferred right into the clothes your boy may put on his back.

"Woolly Boy" Clothes are made by skilled labor in the lightest and most sanitarr shops in the country. Shops that pass the most rigid health inspection at all times. If safe guarding your boy's health were the only inducement offered you to buy
