Decoration Day

Decoration Day this year brought with it one of the finest and most enjoyable days of the season. While the weather was not as cool as could have been wished, yet the heavy clouds dispelled much of the heat that would otherwise have been most depressing, and made it a pleasurable occasion for all.

Card of Thanks

We desire to thank each and every one who helped to make Cemetery Day a success, especially the Misses Gladys and Esther Hosier, Catherine Owens and Amanda Steen.

A Precocious Poet

The past school year, a little 10-year-old boy, Lloyd Emerson, son of Dr. Emerson of Elmhurst, Neb., has been making his home with Commissioner McDonald, at Austin, and it develops that the little fellow has the born spirit of a poet within him.

DO NOT DRINK WHISKY Do not drink whisky In all cases it's bad. Do not drink whisky or you will be sad.

Whiskey is wrong As many will tell. Whiskey is vile And is not fit to sell.

Leave whisky alone. And then you're a man. If you fall for it You're worse than a tin can.

If you quit whisky And start in right. Then there won't be poverty But what you can fight.

The following tribute to a rough haired, ill-mannered horse, was thought out and put together while the above youthful author was leading the bulky bay to water, and it was dictated for copy while the horse listened and approved, at the stable on the ranch near Ellsworth, Neb., May 16, 1913:

The big bay horse Is tough and coarse And hasn't got much sense. He hates to work. He likes to play And kick and break the fence.

Get my prices and see my stock of watches before making your purchase. Schwaner, the Jeweler.

A Cheap Pit Silo

No farmer or dairyman should be without a silo, or need be without one on account of lacking money to build with or to buy one.

Select the hill or knoll nearest to the barn, or your feeding location; dig a trench into it, leaving the mouth of the trench lower than the back of it, so it will drain.

This trench does not necessarily have to be cemented up or walled up—just make a good, clean job of it.

If you have an ensilage cutter, all right, use it for cutting your corn up. If not, put it in whole, seeing that the stalks are laid parallel with each other.

In this way you get an absolutely air-tight silo, and you don't lose the eight inches of foot of ensilage that is generally lost in the stand-up silos.

Of course, there can be all kinds of extra finishing touches put on this trench silo, if you wish, such as cementing it up or walling it up, supplying it with a cement bottom, and covering it with a tarpaulin and then dirt, instead of straw and dirt.

A Big Day June 18

Advice from Central City state that the big rally to be held there June 18 in the interests of larger and more profitable milk production will be one of the biggest affairs in the state along agricultural lines.

It is a mistake to build only one silo. Why not have one or two silos full left over in case of emergency during a dry season? They will be sealed up with dirt, and would keep a few years anyhow.

Any inquiries regarding any of the silos mentioned will be gladly given by H. M. DeWitt, Denver, Colorado.

People from sixteen counties will be there. Better plan to attend.

Special Teachers' Examination.

A special teachers' examination will be given the third Friday and following Saturday in June, June 20 and 21st, 1913, in all county certificate subjects only.

Obituary

James W. Landers

The sad news of the death of James W. Landers, of Arcadia, came too late for more than mere mention in our last issue.

J. W. Landers, generally known as Jim, was born in Missouri in 1854, moved to Iowa in boyhood, and was married to Martha J. Thompson in 1874. They moved to Loup City, Nebraska, in 1880, where he engaged in the butcher business, and with the advent of the railroad, branched out into the stock business and was very successful, being one of the best judges of live stock in the northwest.

Jim was noted for his liberality, no person in need of assistance ever appealed to him but that his hand (as if by natural instinct) went to his pocket in response thereto.

Some may sit in the scorching seat. And hurl the cynic's ban. But liberal Jim was seldom best. In being a triped to man.

If a flower were placed upon his grave for every kind act bestowed, his last resting place would be a bed of roses. When the darkness of death came to the home of a friend, Jim Landers was not deterred by weather or distance in his efforts to restore peace and comfort to the troubled mind, and as he was faithful to friends and lived in the spirit of charity, his many virtues shall not go un-rewarded.

If you want to buy anything, anywhere, let us council with you before you do.

We have traveled, investigated, bought, sold and kept careful count of net results. We have made and lost, but in the main have gained, have often left the near to seek the far off good, which we have seldom found.

Many old men will very likely read these simple words, tired of summer heat and winter cold, they want to rest and we can tell them how because we know of many young men who want to buy just what they desire to sell. We can show them how to do these very things with safety to them both and we can make a profit for ourselves which no one will regret.
