Much of women's daily woe is due to kidney trouble. Sick kidneys cause backache, languor, blind headaches. dizziness, insomnia and urinary troubles. To cure yourself you must cure the kidneys. Profit by the experience of others who have been cured.

Mrs. William W. Brown, professional nurse, of 16 Jane St., Paterson, N. J., says: "I have not only seen much suffering and many deaths from kidney trouble, but I have suffered myself. At one time I thought I could not live. My back ached, there were frequent headaches and dizzy spells, and the kidney secretions were disordered. Doan's Kidney Pills helped me from the first, and soon relieved me entirely of all the distressing and painful symptoms."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mrs. Brown will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists; price 50 cents per box.

Lice and Mites.

Some years ago the Farmers' Review sent out an inquiry to its poultry readers asking what were the leading causes of losses among the surprise to the editor when the reply came back that the greatest cause of the winter just past, when the cold loss to chicks was lice an mites. Some of the poultry raisers estimated that no less than 30 per cent of all the chicks hatched were annually killed off by these two pests, of which the mites were the worst. It is safe to say that if any farmer can manage to exterminte these insects and keep them out of his flock he will increase the profits from his poultry at least 50 per cent, without anything else being done. The body lice of fowls are quite easily kept off by the use of a dust bath and by the use of grease on the heads, around the tail feathers and under the wings. Perhaps some should be put at the base of the wing feathers. These body lice become smeared with the grease, their pores become filled and death quickly follows. Not so easily handled are the mites. One would have to keep the birds covered with grease all the time and all over to protect them from the ravages of these little pirates. The mites do not stay on the bodies of the have discovered. We have seen poultry houses in which we believed this could not be done on account of the irregularity of construction. When houses are loosely thrown together there are so many seams and cracks, so many apertures behind slivers, so many rotten holes in posts, to say nothing of nail holes and knot holes, that a pest of this kind can become osene and paint are the three chief More light, more fresh air, better ar- free use of St. Jacobs Oil. Age of Market Birds.

Nothing is more important to the average buyer of poultry than to know how to distinguish good and had, old and young birds, says H. W. Atwater of the United States Department of Agriculture. A good, fresh bird shows a well-rounded form with neat, compact legs and no sharp, bony angles on the breast, indicating a lack of his animals comfortable. tender white meat. The skin should be a color (yellow being preferred in the American market) and free from blotches and pinfeathers. The flesh should be neither flabby nor stiff, but should give evenly and gently when pressed by the finger.

In a fresh bird, the feet feel moist, soft and limber, and if dressed with the head on the eyes look bright and full. As it becomes stale the eyes shrink and the feet dry and harden: when too stale, i. e., when decomposition is well under way, the body turns dark and greenish. Cold storage birds are commonly packed so closely that the wings remain pressed against the body even after the birds have been ing houses that will trust would fill unpacked for some time. They can usually be distinguished by the squeezed look from fresh birds, which Little Willie-Papa, what is meant should lie or hang in a natural posi-

One of the commonest ways of testing the age of dressed poultry is to take the end of the breastbone farthest from the head between thumb and finger and attempt to bend it to one side. In a very young bird, say a "broiler" chicken or a green goose, it will be easily bent, like the cartiyear or so old it will be brittle, and in an old bird tough and hard to bend or break. It was not more than ten feet in height, so far as available space for air was concerned, and the cows were packed as closely together as it was possible for them to stand, with a feeding floor only six feet wide in front. There was a single window in the west. Yet from this stable went out milk to supply the neighboring villagers. Conditions were almost at that point where a board of health could be justified in stepping in. Yet the owner had tried to be up-to-date and had laid cement floors both in front of and behind the cows. Over the cement were laid planks to make the cows more com- bum. fortable. This showed enterprise, yet the great lack was light. In the building of a new stable the addition of the proper windows is not a hard matter, and in the case of stables already in use this should not be neglected. Few of our cow keepers fully appreciate the health-giving powers

The whole secret of producing good milk can be generalized in a few words: Healthy, clean and well-fed cows having a clean, comfortable stable; healthy, clean and quiet milkers having a disposition to treat the slightest pain. cows at least fairly; sound, clean and sterilized utensils, prompt cooling and protection of the milk. This is the secret that is bringing success to some dairymen while their neighbors fail. These conditions could be introduced easily, cheaply and profitably into thousands of dairies. Too many dairymen make the mistake of thinking that a large outlay of money is necescould be changed to a sanitary from an unsanitary condition without the pacteria on the walls and partitions -these things are not expensive-and perhaps a new ceiling or floor above the cows to exclude dust from the hay mow .- R. The fact that the Orpingtons want to set every month in the year enables us to have plenty of broody hens. Also to get the best results from our incubators, we set a sufficient number of hens at the same time and on the nineteenth day have our incubators all ready and transfer the eggs. Every fertile egg is thus hatched out and we can utilize our hens right over again.

First bloom noted in 1893: and first fruit in 1895, but this variety has never borne a heavy crop of fruit. Fruit, rather large for crab: color a greenish yellow ground with beautiful lilac colored blush on exposed cheek. Flesh creamy white, crisp; flavor quite acid but nearly free from astringency, quality good. Ripens in September. The unproductiveness of this variety is its greatest drawback: we do not recommend it.
