CORNHUSKERS READY FOR NOTRE DAME

DANGLE HAWKEYE SCALPS; PLOT FOR NOTRE DAME

EVERY MAN OUT FOR PRACTICE
LAST NIGHT

Injuries Slight and Catholics Will Buck Nebraska's Strongest Combination

With the scalps of the Hawkeyes dangling from their belts, the Husker warriors returned to the home field yesterday afternoon and started preparations to entertain the Notre Dame representatives on Thursday.

The win over Iowa did as much or more for the team as the loss to Kansas. The Hawkeye game gave the team some idea of their actual strength and the men entered into practice last night with an energy that threatens trouble for Cofall, Bachman, etc., on Thursday.

Every Man for Practice
Every man on the squad reported for practice last night, though all were not in the best of condition. Caley, Moser and Kositzky are all injured more or less seriously.

Caley, who did a great share of the gaining Saturday is quite bungled up every place but his head. Kositzky has a very bad knee and Moser is still suffering from a sore shoulder and will not get into the big game unless Cameron is disabled.

The line-up for the Notre Dame game will probably be the same as that started the Iowa game. The combination as used Saturday seemed to work better than at any time during the season.

Otoupalik, who repeatedly tore holes in Iowa's line Saturday is expected to show up well against the Indiana boys if he will fight as hard as he is capable of. Rhodes in his new position at guard was a star Saturday and if in good condition Thursday will give the mighty Bachman a hard battle.

Will Give Their All
Riddell and Shaw can be depended on to give all they have against the Catholics. Through their inexperience last year they were fooled by a couple of Notre Dame tricks and both have resolved to make up for the errors of a year ago and add some more.

Dobson and Wilder, both first year men, have promised to give absolutely all they have in one supreme effort to close the season with a victory.

And For the Rest
The rest of the men, Captain Corey, Kositzky, Cameron, Cook and Caley, have all been through the mill before and each one knows just what is expected of him.

FIRST PROM TICKETS TO UPPERCLASSMEN

FRESHMEN AND SOPHOMORES
MUST WAIT FOR JUNIOR PARTY

First Class Formal Will be Given at the Lincoln Hotel December

Juniors and seniors will have the first chance to buy tickets for the junior prom, a dinner-dance, which will be given December 15, at the Lincoln hotel, the prom chairman, Max Miller, announced yesterday when tickets were placed on sale.

Until next Monday noon, no sophomore or freshman will be given a chance to buy a ticket. After that time, however, if the upperclassmen have not taken all of the admission cards, the younger students may get them.

The junior prom will open the formal season at the University, and those who are close to committee members say that it will be the finest party ever given by a class.

Cost is More
Tickets will cost $3.50. This is higher than class formals have cost in the past, but the increase has been made necessary by the increase in the price of food at the Lincoln hotel.

The best of music, the most beautiful decorations, nifty programs, and a real good dinner are the promises made for the party by the chairman.

Owen R. Lovejoy will speak at convocation December 5. Mr. Lovejoy is general manager of the National Child Labor committee in New York and is one of the most important authorities on the child labor problem. His address should be of great interest to all University students. He comes to Lincoln under the auspices of the Social Service club of the city.

KANSAS DEBATE MOVED FORWARD TO DECEMBER 13

The date of the Nebraska-Kansas debate at Lawrence and in Lincoln has been changed from December 14 to Wednesday night, December 13, it was announced last night.

Tickets for the debate will be placed on sale today. The Nebraska teams are hard at work under Prof. M. M. Fogg. The Kansas teams are said to have more experienced men than the Nebraskans, and the Kansas bunch is working to live up to the achievements of the Jayhawk football team.

GIRLS COSTUME PARTY PLANNED

Hawaiian Chorus Promises to be a Feature of the Annual Party

At last, Friday, December the 8th—the Girl's Cornhusker party—at the Armory.

Plans are practically completed now for the big party for the girls the night of the Cornhusker banquet. This party is now a tradition at Nebraska, and is one of the biggest affairs of the year. All the girls of the University are invited and are asked to come dressed in costume.

There will be a short but interesting program given by different groups, some representing characteristic entertainments of different countries. There will be especially a Hawaiian chorus with ukeleles and a gypsy dance. In addition, there will be an exciting football game and all the members of the team will be there in full regalia.

About seventy-four people were at the art gallery Sunday afternoon. In the absence of Associate Prof. Blanche C. Grant, due to illness, Dr. H. B. Lowry gave a very interesting talk on Mr. Fournier's pictures now on exhibition.

Daily Nebraskan Football Edition

The football edition of The Daily Nebraskan will be published Thursday morning, and student subscribers may obtain copies at Station A from 10 to 12 o'clock Thanksgiving morning.

The football edition will be sold on the field at the Notre Dame game in the afternoon, and all copies not called for in the morning at the hours mentioned will be put into the hands of the newsmen in the afternoon.

Vacation commences today, so this is the last regular issue of The Nebraskan until after Thanksgiving recess.

The paper will resume publication Tuesday morning, December 5.

LAST APPEAL FOR WAR PRISONERS MADE TODAY

STUDENTS HAVE OPPORTUNITY TO RETURN THANKS

Practical Results to Humanity in a Gift to the Men in the Prison
Camps of Europe

The last appeal of the starving men in the prison camps of Europe to the University students of Nebraska is being made today, the day when the greater portion of the student body is starting for home for Thanksgiving.

It has seemed to some especially fit that Nebraskans, who are giving thanks for the many good things that are theirs, should have a practical means of expressing their thanks—by giving to the men who have done their duty by their country, and who are paying the price as men should pay it, as we would have our men pay it in a like crisis.

Dr. Fling, in speaking to his European history students yesterday about the fund, said that this was a very practical opportunity for the students to repay in some measure their debt to humanity.

Not a Charity Affair
The one thing that is emphasized by those who are most interested in the fund is that this is not a charity. It is a free-will offering, a gift out of the largeness of one's heart, to men who are in most abject want.

Under rules of modern warfare exchanges of prisoners are not made. If a man is caught he is interned and he must stay in his prison camp until the war ends and he is released, or until, as it is every day becoming the more common thing, until he dies from hunger, from cold, or from insanity brought on by the hopelessness of his surroundings.

And yet these men, and there are now almost 6,000,000 of them, are the men to whom Europe must look for her progress in the years to immediately follow the war.

They are the men who are to rebuild the ruined cities, reclaim the fields that have become the burial grounds of thousands of troops, bring again into life the feeling of world brotherhood.

Students Are Suffering

The thing wherein this makes its strongest appeal to the American student is the fact that his gift, in a very large degree, will go toward alleviating the sufferings of fellow students, but students no longer, men now just soldiers captured in warfare.

Up in Montreal, Can., McGill college fraternity houses are no longer the scene of fellowship gatherings around the piano or around the fireplace, singing songs, and telling the light anecdotes of the day.

The houses are converted into hospitals to hold the wounded. McGill students volunteered by the hundreds for the war, and it is said that of several battalions that went, only eighty men now remain alive.

The consciousness that things like this exist is what has caused the American student to feel the call of the world brotherhood, and to take

RALLY FOR NOTRE DAME GAME IN ARMORY TODAY

THANKSGIVING CONVOCATION
AND FOOTBALL MASS MEETING

Students Will Declare Their Confidence in the Ability of the Team to Beat the Catholics

Nebraska must beat Notre Dame.

With that spirit the last football rally of the year will be held in Memorial hall this morning as a part of the Thanksgiving convocation.

The rejuvenation of the team, the wonderful fight it made at Iowa, have filled the student body with confidence.

Nebraska has a wholesome respect for Bergman, Bachman and the other stars of Captain Cofall's crew, and yet Nebraska has unlimited faith in the cohorts of Captain Corey.

The rally will be a part of the Thanksgiving convocation.

The program for the convocation,

as announced last evening will be something after this fashion:

All Sing America

Everybody will sing America. The chorus, under the direction of Mrs. Raymond, the director of music, will sing the anthem, "Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem."

Governor Morehead will read his Thanksgiving proclamation.

Professor Barbour will present the gold medals offered by the Pan-Hellenic council for the freshman, sophomore and junior girl making the highest scholarship average for last year.

And the rally.
For the latter part of the program the University yells will ring through the old chapel hall.

Dean Engberg will tell how the football situation looks to him.

Dick Rutherford, the assistant coach, will speak. So will Captain Corey. So will Bob Cameron.

And several others of the team are very apt to be called upon.

JACK STEVENS, '05, PUT ACROSS BIG ENGINEERING JOB

J. C. Stevens, civil '05, has a three-page illustrated article in "The Engineering Record," describing the $600,000 irrigation project in Washington where he was engineer in charge.

The bonds were floated by James J. Hill and taken up by small landowners to prevent speculation in this district, which is one of the finest in the country. The sixty-seven miles of conduit was carefully guarded against all leakage by putting pipes in the places having the greatest wear instead of wood.

"Jack" Stevens was in the party that went to Spain a few years ago in hydro-electric work under Joe Sargeant.

stock of himself to learn what he can give up for the men abroad.

Tables for subscriptions will be on the campus again today. They can also be made in The Daily Nebraskan or the student activities office.

STUDENT LABORERS TO REST FROM TOIL

FIRST RECESS OF YEAR COM-
MENCES AT 6 TONIGHT

Turkey an Attraction, But the Notre Dame Game Will Hold Many
in Lincoln

Student laborers will quit work when the whistle blows at 6 o'clock this evening, marking the official commencement of the annual Thanksgiving recess, and will not return to the trouble and care of school duties until the alarm clock jangles in their ears next Monday morning. Hundreds of students, lugging ready-packed grips and full-sized turkey appetites, will hasten through the dusk to catch early evening trains for home.

There are many who have anticipated the arrival of the official moment when they are at liberty, and have gotten early starts on the home-bound trail. Monday afternoon classes were noticeably small, and attendance today will be still lighter. Those living in the distant sections of Nebraska and in other states who plan to eat turkey at home have already begun the journey.

Turkey Not All
Turkey, however, is not the big attraction of the recess this year, for although the campus will be deserted Wednesday, those living near Lincoln will return for the Notre Dame game on Thanksgiving day, contenting themselves with a makeshift dinner in Lincoln or a late feast at home. The game with the Catholics is the first gridiron battle Nebraska has had on turkey day since 1910, and it is an innovation to the present student body. Many who view the approaching Christmas recess, with its pleasing stretch of two weeks, as the logical vacation period, are remaining in Lincoln throughout the recess so that they can be present at the Notre Dame game. There is a surprisingly small number of students who will stay at home over Thursday, missing the encounter.

Flying Trip Back
A flying trip back home will be the order of things for those who return for the game. Automobiles will be pressed into service, making possible
