THE GREATEST TOURNAMENT

One hundred and twenty-one high schools have announced themselves as contenders for honors in the ninth annual, and greatest high school tournament yet held at Nebraska. Last year previous records were broken with an entry list of one hundred and seventeen. Each year additional towns over the State become ambitious and decide that they will put their borough on the map of the basketball world. Within a very few years there will not be a town in the State capable of producing five men for a team, that will not be represented at the tourney.

The men out-state look forward the whole year, to the time when they will come to Lincoln to participate in the Big Event. The tournament is the great experience of the year. Plans are laid at the beginning of the year for making a prize-winning team. Most of the small towns take no interest in football, and consequently spend all their efforts and time in perfecting a basketball machine. Men know that Varsity men will be on the lookout for exceptional players. Consequently they come prepared to show the best that is in them, and the games give exhibition of the best ability in the State.

The high school students expect to receive cordial treatment during their stay in Lincoln. If they do not receive a warm reception they will go away from the University with a feeling that they are not wanted here, and that they would never be able to feel at home at our institution. Every effort must be put forth during the tournament to give the visitors an enjoyable week-end. We must make realization even better than anticipation. The boys should go home with the determination to return to the University when they finish high school. Nebraska must be the only school that enters their mind. We cannot afford to lose our raw material to Kansas, Iowa, or any neighboring school. The impression we make on the high school athletes will be a determining factor in the future success of our athletic teams. The "N" should be made the ideal of every high school athlete.

WISE SPENDING

Are you a wise spender? Wise spending is regarded as a highly important preliminary to thrift by the U. S. Treasury. As part of its campaign for promoting popular savings through Thrift and War Savings Stamps during 1919, it has issued through its Savings Division the following definition of wise spending, which merits the thoughtful attention of every family and every individual who would get ahead in life:

"Wise spending implies the balancing of all needs and of all means of meeting these needs and, after balancing needs against means, spending in such a way as to meet the most urgent needs, even if lesser ones have to be left unsatisfied; in essence it means a sort of budget-making. When a family, city or state makes a budget, what it does essentially is to take a comprehensive view of both needs and income. It is important that not all the income be spent on the first needs that may occur lest other more urgent needs appear and no funds be left to meet them; that is, thought must be taken so that available income can be applied intelligently and wisely to cover most important needs and to satisfy them somewhat in proportion to their relative importance.

"Perhaps the most important and difficult problem in connection with wise spending (or saving) is to realize the relative importance of future as compared with present needs. It is very foolish to neglect the urgent necessities of today for the petty wants of the morrow, but few need very much persuasion to induce them to take care of the present. Where most of us are foolish or unwise is in satisfying petty wants of the present rather than saving in order that urgent needs of the future can be met."—Industrial Collegian.

SILVER CHEVRONS

The papers have had a prolonged case of fidgets over the silver chevrons issued recently to service men whose duty was done in this country and not abroad. It comes back to whether the public has any real idea of what the stay-at-homes did. The information has been rather amply spread abroad, but, of course, it may not have soaked in. This may or may not prove to be the last war of our times. If it is, then the service men stationed here made possible our share in winning it, and are entitled to all the credit that goes to the devisers of far-flung plans and to the builders of strong foundations. If it is not, then the service men on this side of the Atlantic have fortified us for years to come against the danger of being unable to play our part effectively in the next war. Thanks to them, we now know exactly how to plan, locate, and build any sort of military establishment from an airplane factory to a school for army cooks; how to estimate for, buy, make and move each and all of the 100,000 or 200,000 separate sorts of things that a modern army has to move; how to raise and handle men, and so on, and so on. The mind reels in trying to imagine the vast masses of typewritten memoranda, photographs, blue prints, and other documents which record all these practical details of how to save our

Will Help You Solve the Farm Labor Problem

OMAHA distributes into this territory over $18,000,000 worth of farm implements and tractors annually.

By bringing to your door a large stock of implements, it is making it easy for the farmers of this section to select and buy the modern machinery so necessary in the days of labor shortage.

Production is increased, more money is brought into the state, and everybody is benefited, all because Omaha is the third largest implement center of the country.

The Mid-West Implement Show held annually in Omaha brings all the leading models of the world together for your inspection. No long wait for repairs, because there are large stocks of implement parts in Omaha.

GREEKS NOW READY FOR SEMI-FINALS

Gene Moore, one by Ernst, and a free throw by Thomas. The Sig Nu's failed to locate and the half ended 7 to 0 for the A. T. O.'s.

The Sig Nu's broke into the score in the beginning of the final period on a goal of Verne Moore's. And a foul on Gene Moore gave them another counter. A few blows interrupted the game for a while, but the intervention of Coach Stewart calmed the troubled waters and the game drifted to a peaceful victory for A. T. O.'s.
