WORK VS PLEASURE

It's the young man or woman who is sticking to his or her ideal today in spite of the rapidly changing fashions, habits or customs that is going to succeed tomorrow. Seldom does the world witness such a spectacle as we see today. Styles change over night; old fixed habits are superseded by the new free thinking and action; thrift has turned into spendthrift and study has become a wild search for pleasure. But in the face of this revolution the solid, substantial young man or woman refuses to abandon his or her way of thinking, speaking, behaving and it is this person that has a license to look forward to reward.

Style, fashion and the search for idle pleasure have grown to be glutinous. But they have grown like a mushroom and are doomed for an early and rapid execution. And the one who has concentrated on the latest thing in dress, the very newest dance steps and spent his earnings on the present-day superficial amusements finds himself facing a period of character reconstruction. The man who has been and who still is pegging along steadily and surely will be the one to accept the rewards when the world comes to offer them.

THE HONOR SYSTEM AGAIN

Does the honor system work? We are of the opinion that it will work here at Nebraska just as it has in many other institutions of learning all over the country. Nebraska students possess the same degree if not a higher degree of honor as the students of any college or university. Examinations are written in examination books which have a pledge printed on the inside cover which may or may not be signed as the individual wishes. If an individual is found cheating in an examination, his case is dealt with by Honor Commission, which is elected by the student body, and a punishment is decided upon and carried out with the aid of the faculty.

At the University of Chicago before the honor system was adopted, there were so many cases of cheating reported that the faculty was at a loss what to do for they didn't have time to deal fairly with the individuals implicated. After the institution of the system only a few cases of dishonesty were found and rarely has any one had to be expelled.

After all honor is more or less of a habit, and the university is the best place in which to cultivate good habits.

MAKE THE BOYS WELCOME

Present reports indicate that there will be from two hundred to two hundred and fifty high schools represented at the state basketball tournament here March 2, 3 and 4. This means that a thousand or more high school boys will be in Lincoln for at least three days. The students should strive to make these boys welcome. In a year or two most of these boys will be finishing their high school careers and considering if it will pay them to continue their education and which school they should attend. It should be the aim of every loyal Cornhusker to give them such an impression of our school that they will naturally consider coming here.

For some years past it has been known that a number of the most promising athletes that our high schools produce have been lost to eastern schools. Each student has in his power the remedy to this state of affairs. There is no reason why these men should go to other schools. Nebraska had a football team last fall that was the equal of any eastern team. This fact should be emphasized to all high school boys until they realize the true worth of our school.

These young fellows come from nearly every town in the state. When they go back they are going to talk about the treatment they received here. If they give a favorable report it is going to do a great deal for the school. The taxpayers will feel that they are getting their moneys worth and it should make it easier to secure appropriations from the legislature. On the other hand if these boys should tell their homefolks that they were treated badly they will do the University more harm than it could stand at any time. We will lose the support of the state and will be given a reputation whose basis may be only the customs of one or two individual students.

Contemporary Opinion

CONTEM OPINION

CLASSROOM ETIQUETTE

University students are supposedly of an age which places them above infringements upon classroom etiquette. By the time we reach this University we have passed through twelve years of preparatory training, and one of the things they try to teach in every one of those twelve years, is that talking during a lecture by an instructor, is very discourteous. Yet there still seem to be a great many students who have not grasped the lesson.

Many times we hear complaints that students are not able to hear lectures because somebody near them carries on a fifty minute conversation, instead of listening to the lecture. We were in this situation ourselves recently, as we tried to understand a discourse on the nervous system in a psychology course while two upperclassmen behind us were arguing whether or not any of the Iowa athletes would be declared ineligible. Talking in an undertone during lectures in discourteous to the lecturer, detrimental to other students, and a breach of classroom etiquette.

The natural inference is that a student who would whisper in a lecture room, would eat with his knife instead of his fork, would tuck his napkin in at his collar, and would have no respect at all for etiquette, at the table or elsewhere. This simplest of all infringements upon classroom courtesy is easily corrected—postpone your conversation until after class, and at least try to make the instructor believe that you are interested in his lecture—Daily Iowan.

STUDENT PHILOSOPHY

There is one critical time in a student's life when he wouldn't care if the prof had a harmless stroke of paralysis that would still his "wagin" tongue, pull the shades down over his window lights, dredge the anvils and stirrups out of his auditory canals, break off the hinges of his joints, and tear a couple of scantlings out of his lumber region and that is about the time of his final exams.
