FELLOW CORNHUSKERS—

The spirit of Nebraska has been challenged. On two separate occasions an indifferent exhibition of cheering and of encouraging the football team while at practice has been given.

This weakness of spirit has been noticed. Coach Dawson, himself, on personal appeal, has not been able to arouse the students watching the practices, to real whole-hearted support. The team members have noticed it too, and it will be only natural if they react to such spirit and let their own drop to the level of the students.

This is the challenge Cy Sherman of the Lincoln Daily Star throws down to you as a Nebraska student. "The Tuesday rooting practice by the students was even more of a fizzle than the workout on the field. It is no assault on the virtues to proclaim that the lack of student spirit was a disgrace to the Cornhusker institution. Another such lamentable showing by the student body would justify Coach Dawson in closing the gates to all future practice workouts. Nebraska students who refuse to rehearse Nebraska yells deserve a football team that will lose every game on the schedule."

This evening at the football rally is our first chance to accept the challenge. The spirit of the school is at stake and every student must attend the rally to convince the world that they are true Cornhuskers. If you have spirit show it the whole year through.

AT THE GAME

Familiar to those who attend University athletic contests are the members of the Women's Athletic Association who sell good things to eat. On warm days, their baskets are filled with candy bars, peanuts and apples. Those who are cheering the hardest for the team find the apples particularly well suited to quenching the thirst and softening parched throats. When the weather is chilly the vendors also offer quick, hot hamburgers to the hungry mob in the bleachers.

The girls with their baskets will go through the bleachers tomorrow collecting dimes in return for food. They receive no money return for their work.

All of the profits from the concession for selling at the athletic events go in the treasury of the W. A. A. From this money, the W. A. A. is accustomed to make large donations to campus projects and relief work. Among other gifts, the W. A. A. has pledged a large sum for the new stadium. A part of the money goes to buy athletic equipment, to send delegates to the national convention, and to maintain the numerous activities of this important women's organization.

CHEER LEADERS SATURDAY

Our success at cheering has not been phenomenal so far this year, and at our opening game Saturday, we really ought to get started. All the men have not yet been chosen for the cheerleaders squad of four, and final tryouts come at the game Saturday. Give those men who are trying out a chance—give them the best you have and show them you really have some pep. If some men have enough ambition to get out for cheerleading, you ought to have enough to show them you at least appreciate their efforts.

NEBRASKA NEEDS YOU

Tomorrow afternoon Nebraska meets South Dakota in the opening game of the 1922 football season. The Cornhusker grid men have been drilling for three weeks preparing for this game. Each day the men have reported at the Athletic field and worked for three hours in the hot sun preparing for tomorrow's contest with the Dakota team. They have scrimmaged until they were at the point of exhaustion and they have drilled on the finer points of the game day after day.

Coach Dawson and the Cornhusker eleven are ready for the Coyote invasion. They have worked together until they have rounded out a team which can and will put up a strong battle against the Dakota grid machine. A powerful eleven will go into the game tomorrow representing Nebraska. This team, Nebraska's team, your team and my team—cannot win unless the students turn out and cheer for it.

The Nebraska team is the superior of the South Dakota team as far as football is concerned. But it takes something more than eleven football players on the field to win a football game. That "something more" is student spirit and loyalty to the team. That student spirit and loyalty, expressed by a full grandstand and continuous and whole-hearted cheering, will win the game for Nebraska.

Do you want Nebraska to win? Of course you do. Well, then, turn out and cheer tomorrow and Nebraska will win.

—Rally Tonight at 7:15—
NEBRASKA LOSSES

Nebraska loses to the east in the resignation of Dr. W. Clyde Davis, dean of the Dental College. He goes from here to Milford, Delaware, to head a dental research institute and post-graduate school.

Dean Davis has given of his best to the college and to the whole University. The college is, according to Chancellor Avery, practically the creation of Dr. Davis. He has developed it into a college of which Nebraska is justly proud.

As he resigns, Dean Davis expresses his desire for the future of the college. He, as always, set high standards for it. We regret that he must leave the University.

"MOOCHERS"

Do you borrow? Of the many habits possessed by students, borrowing is the most prevalent. "Moochers" will not appreciate this, but their victims will. Most Honorable "Moocher" enter our humble abode whenever you wish. Our necessities are at your disposal. It is our aim to serve you. Borrow our best clothes and return them in any condition when you feel so inclined. We never use them. Never hesitate in taking our last sheet of stationery or stamp. Our supply of towels and soap is unlimited. Help yourself. The world owes its parasites a living. The dog must make life pleasant for his fleas and so must we make school life enjoyable for you, most honorable "Moochers." Do you borrow?

THE RALLY

We want our team to go into the game tomorrow with the feeling that the whole student body is behind them. Just to show them where we stand we are all going to be at the rally at 7:15 tonight in the Armory. We are ready to say, go to it team. We are back of you.

Do you know every word of "The Cornhusker"? If not, get a songbook and learn the official song so you can sing out strong tonight.

EVERYBODY'S MAIL

Dear Everybody:
Have you all been to the Rialto? Well, don't miss it. I'm not trying to advertise the picture, no indeed just the contrary. I really didn't care for the feature at all. It made me shed gallons of tears and I just ruined my new pongee handkerchief. Oh, the acting was very wonderful but I do not like sad, weepy pictures. The thing I think you should go for is the movie of the campus. Why, it is perfectly clever, and I just puffed all up with pride when I saw my University in the movie. I'm just positive that I caught a glimpse of Dottie Dipple, dashing before the camera, sporting her vampish "ear-rings," and when they showed a picture of the Freshman barbecue, I know I saw Wilbur Peterson standing right next to Chancellor Avery. I don't see how Wilbur gets a stand in, but I heard that he had charge of the buns and that Chancellor Avery is fond of them. I guess that accounts for it. I couldn't quite recognize the persons in front of the "Rag" office, but I think several of the reporters were in evidence.

Your picture might have been taken in the rush, so I suggest that you go and see. Perhaps you photograph extraordinarily well and can aspire to become a Gloria Swanson or a Rodolf Valentino.

Say, isn't the weather perfectly divine? I hope that it stays like it is customary to get cold and snow in the winter time.

You see, I am running out of anything to say, so I had better close before you stop reading.

I wish you would write to me. If you do I will publish your letter and my answer to it in the paper sometime. Just address me care of The Daily Nebraskan.

Oodles of love,
MISS CHATTERBOX

RAGBAG

Thanks for small favors.
The free showers on the campus are ingenious; it is very refreshing. To be able to cool off under the grass sprinklers. The birds on the campus seem to enjoy it immensely.

"I'll raise you two" as the man said to the orphans.

"I have control of the males," said the girl as she posted the letters.

FABLES AS ART

American and Russian accomplishments in art are somewhat akin according to "The Unsung Critic" who writes to the Philadelphia Evening Ledger as follows:
"Have you noticed Paul Terry's Aesop's Film Fables? I consider them very close to art, for they bring both novelty and imagination to the screen just as the Chauve Souris is bringing them to the stage in New York."

In commenting upon this thought, Henry M. Neely, movie editor of the paper says: "I hardly compare the paper's Fables of the screen to the Chauve Souris, but some of them are rather neat."

If a critic admits the film fables are "neat" they must be very entertaining even if they don't quite rank with the Chauve Souris as art.

—Rally Tonight at 7:15—

In search of first-hand information about domestic animals, Paul Terry spent a recent week-end on a farm down in Monmouth county, New Jersey. Paul paid special attention to some goats so that he might embody typical characteristics in a forthcoming reel of "Aesop's Film Fables."

The farmer, who was very proud of his herd, pointed to a big billy and remarked:
"I raised that fine goat over there."
"You bred the butter, eh," reversed Terry.
