Education Means Happiness for Some, Not Others, Says Mrs. Halle

"Until God or science, or God directing science, or what ever we choose to believe, has devised means by which we may all start life with an equal natural equipment," says Rita S. Halle, in McCall's magazine, "human beings cannot all attain the heights by the same route."

Despite this fact Mrs. Halle states in her article, on modern youth going to college, that all young America seems to be headed in the same direction—to college.

"Rich or poor, fit or unfit, they are pressing on, their eyes on the light of learning ahead. Each one, his eager parents urging him forward, sees in this higher education the sure symbol of success and happiness."

Mrs. Halle apparently believes that education is neither necessary nor beneficial to all, but as she says:

"To some it is given to work out their life's happiness with their brains, to others with their brawn; to some to reach the goal through the things of the mind, to others through their hands or human contacts. To some, college will be the biggest factor in their success; to others it will be no less than a real tragedy.

"Those who are going to college," says Mrs. Halle, "should be sure that they are properly equipped for it physically, emotionally and mentally. If a student has not the type of mentality that will enable him to keep up with the work without constant struggle and misery, he should not go. No matter how much one may want to go to college because of the social life or athletics, or other similar secondary reasons, he must remember that a certain amount of academic work is necessary. If he does not intend to let his academic work interfere with his college course, he had better stay at home."

Mrs. Halle quotes from an editorial in a prominent eastern college daily, that very few of the graduating class had any idea of what they are going to do. Many had vague plans in mind but nothing definite. She does not think that a college really prepares for and teaches the student exactly what he wants and needs. Though many colleges now have lectures to introduce courses to their freshmen, that they might have otherwise never known existed until too late.

Boys and girls are going to various colleges for any number of reasons. Sometimes because it was some relatives alma mater or their friends are going there, or a boy may choose his college because it has a famous football team.

"One of the most important questions," Mrs. Halle believes, "from the point of view of the happiness of the individual is his fitness for the large or small college. For the student whose outlook has been the narrow one of a small community, but who has sufficient self confidence to take his place in a larger circle, the larger group is advisable. The student of a retiring, studious nature is better off in a small college."

Mrs. Halle ends in praising the younger generation: "American youth," she declares, "realizes its strength, its responsibilities, its opportunities. Despite all the talk about flapperism and demoralization among the young people, never before, have such large numbers of them taken themselves and life so seriously; never before have so many of them sought all the education that they could get, for that purpose."

Bearmen Ready For Tiger Fight Saturday

group of fans will leave this afternoon, arriving in Lincoln in ample time to see the game. Twenty line-men and thirteen backfield men compose the largest squad which has ever made a trip from Columbia to another gridiron.

Mizzou hopes for another victory were jaded somewhat when it was announced that Forrie Fowler, giant punting ace, would not appear in the line-up. Fowler, whose father objected to his playing his third year of football, had been reporting regularly for practice during the last week, while making a further plea with his father for permission to enter the game. But his father took so determined a stand against the sport that Fowler has reluctantly turned in his uniform.

With Fowler out of the line-up, it will probably be Studebaker, 200-pound tackle, who will do the booting against Nebraska. Studebaker was slightly injured in last Saturday's game, but Coach Henry has declared him in fit form to start against the Huskers.

Officials for the Saturday game are J. C. McDonald, referee; B. L. McCreary, umpire; Warren Giles, head linesman; and F. E. Denny, field judge.

Children Give Birds to Museum
Many birds have been contributed to the Museum by the school children of the McKinley school, and these have been mounted in the Museum. A humming bird has recently been added to this collection which the children have built up.

"The Tap"

Something very new

THIS WEEK IN THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

THERE'S no question about it, the university men set the styles. The rugged tweed materials, the loose fitting of the season's clothing, call for a special shoe, a nonchalant shoe. The broad toe with a soft box, the bellows tongue, the shovel leather heel with a tap sole make this blucher oxford right for this season. It's time to change to fall weight shoes, and this one will make you a good change.
