THE "UNSHINED SHOES"

That the University has been negligent in the development of the northeastern part of the campus is the charge made by A. J. in a letter which is reprinted in the "Soap-Box".

It is true that the condition of this part of the campus has been anything but pleasant in wet weather. But it is not the University, nor the state, nor the city of Lincoln that is at fault for such a condition.

Considerable grading is being done at the present time in smoothing out the rough places between Morrill hall and the Coliseum in preparation for a memorial mall which is being planned to extend from Vine street on the north to Morrill hall on the south, Twelfth street on the west and Fourteenth street on the east.

To temporarily repair the streets and walks in the northeastern part of the campus, as suggested by A. J., would be utterly useless since the whole project will be completed with a few months.

College in Missouri Plans Gold Search—Headline in the World-Herald. Looks like the beginning of another endowment fund campaign.

THE PERSON NOBODY KNOWS

Employers check up on their employees. Professors check up on their students. Mothers and fathers check up on their children. But how many of us check up on our own selves?

A journalism instructor with vision and foresight, presented qualities for such a check-up. Each student received five gradings on each quality from five reliable associates.

Health, appearance, observation, concentration, memory, imagination, reasoning, general knowledge, business knowledge, ability to express yourself, ambition, confidence, loyalty, enthusiasm, cheerfulness, reliability, energy, resistance, initiative, self control.

They were selected from an article "How to Get the Job You Want." A personal interest in the welfare of his students probably urged this professor to lend a helping hand before their entrance into the various fields of work.

If we were willing to diagnose self, figuratively of course, would not we be the victors in the long run? Many weak attempts at character analysis are mere hodge-podge ploddings that end up as veritable "unfinished symphonies" merely because the youths are unwilling to puncture their distorted ideas of self.

Each student is an Alpha Beta Gamma checking agency with whom proper functioning will result, after an investigation of qualities, into the practise of remedying self through what Galsworthy terms "knowingness".

The Cynic Says:

"Love is a case of temporary insanity," stated a prominent speaker. Then why, according to the decrees of alienists, are men held responsible for the things they say while in that condition?

Parking Rules Scored by Officers

Opinion Is Confirmed

This opinion was confirmed, and more information added by Bruce Thomas, president of Beta Theta Pi. Both the Beta and Delta houses are situated on R street between Fourteenth and Sixteenth streets where traffic is most affected by the parking rules.

Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity president, Willard Bailey, agreed with the first two university men. "We are situated on the corner of R and Sixteenth and can notice the increase in traffic since parallel parking has been instituted," stated Bailey.

undesirable on Sixteenth and R streets."

Agitation Is Carried On

Parallel parking on R street from Tenth to Sixteenth and on Sixteenth from R to Vine, was provided for by the Lincoln department of public safety on February 17. Since that time agitation has been carried on by students in the university for a re-establishment of diagonal parking.

"We would prefer diagonal parking because it gives more room in front of the house," was the opinion of Florence Swihart, president of Pi Beta Phi sorority.

Officials Criticized
Inez Evans, president of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority, made the same remarks that the Pi Phi president advanced. Both sorority houses are situated on Sixteenth street.

Further investigations concerning personal opinions are being made by The Daily Nebraskan. The problem is one of interest and importance to nearly all University students, shown by the response made to the questions of a Nebraska reporter.

Delegates Discuss A. W. S. Conference

(Continued from Page 1) city campus. Miss Nutt was the representative from the University of Michigan where the A. W. S. work is carried on through three fields, committees organized for judicial, legislative and executive duties.

To the Editor:

Did you ever see a well dressed man with his shoes unshined? No! Then did you ever see a beautiful campus devoid of well kept streets?

Referring specifically to the northeastern division of the campus, the streets lying in that part are a reflection not only to the policy of the University but to the city and to the state.

Of course the improving plan of the University will supplement winding walks for several of these thoroughfares and will do away with some of the paving. Until the time that this is done, however, it is obvious that some repair is needed.

Repair on the streets in the newer part of the campus would not necessarily be permanent, perhaps just some temporary surfacing would do well. With the amount of traffic that streets in this part of the campus see, then is it not right that a slight additional effort should be exerted to keep them in condition?

FRATERNALHOOD

We have a Danish friend newly come to America. He is a very fine chap with the best of good manners. But, somehow, we looked down on him for being a foreigner; coming as he did from another country we reasoned he must be our inferior.

Then one day we were talking with him of Danish history and had a rude awakening. Was it not some Danish and Northern vikings who settled in Normandy and came over to England with William the Conqueror? Were we not then distant descendants of these men?

Pushing our icelastic inquiry we asked ourselves a few more questions. Was it not Spain who raised the first flag over our soil and first started civilization? Were not the Dutch, the Portuguese, and the French in the vanguard of our civilization? Did we not draw our culture from the West? Did we not turn to the East for our soil? Had we not drawn on the world at large for our refining process?

Then it was that we realized, most fully, that we were one big family. It was true the world was a small place after all. Yes, we were one large family, whose children's children had split into individual family groups but still, withal, "nth" cousins.

Like a disunited family, however, we fight. Tom, our big brother, gets one more stick of candy than we, so we punt. Jane, our kid sister, has started growing up and putting on airs, so we try to crank her style. A house divided against itself will fall. What we need is a patriarch of old or some of his clear sighted sons to put his house in order.—University of Cincinnati News.

About the worst habit consists in bragging about not having any.—California Daily Bruin.

PYLE DRIVEN

C. C. "Cash and Carry" Pyle is hardly as lacking in sagacity as he has lately been given credit for being. The fact that his widely heralded Bunion Derby has been buried on back pages of the daily press ever since the starting gun is no cause for worry. It is a well-known maxim that the public, like the sea elephant, can be fed a good deal but when fed too much gets nauseated. No one knows this better than the wary Mr. Pyle.

By this morning his weary marathoners will have covered approximately 1800 miles, or a little over half their trek. They are now in the state of Missouri, having plodded steadily onward ever since the fourth of March. It is hardly to be supposed that the reading public, long-suffering as it is, could have stomachached a daily blurb as to the progress of the caravan. This too, is as the A B C to Mr. Pyle. But only wait until the final sprint breaks loose somewhere in the vicinity of Pittsburgh, and the handful of hardy souls left cuts loose. Then will come the deluge. Syndicated throughout the length and breadth of the land will be feature stories of the great race. They will not run on back pages; they will be real news. And in the last few weeks of the procession the country will be showered with about as much information on the ranking of the runners, their vocations, the age of their mothers, the kind of gum they chew, as it can well stand.

It takes the courage of one's convictions to undertake such a project as this one. It takes a not inconsiderable assurance to let slip the goading of the public's interest until the last thousand miles. But gigantic indeed is the mentality of Mr. Pyle, and better than most others does he know not only what the public wants but in what doses it can stand it.—Harvard Crimson.

Countryman Features Fair in April Number

(Continued from Page 1) that will bring out the contributions of each to practical agriculture. There will be thirteen separate exhibits to represent the various departments of the college and their work.

"Master of Miracles," one of the main features of the Farmers' Fair, was explained in an article by Ruth Davis, contributing editor. Every year the home economics department presents a pageant on the college campus.

Girls Give Pageant

Sixty girls will participate in this year's play, of which Charlotte Joyce, freshman in the College of Agriculture takes the leading role. Maxine Churchill, senior home economics student, composed the pageant. The theme of the play is that of a princess who has fallen under the pestilence of ignorance, and the success of science has redeemed the princess to life.

Other articles of importance in the April Countryman are "The Conquest of Science," by Robin Spence; and "Live Stock on Dress Parade," by Victor Sanders. The former article relates to the past and present in Nebraska agriculture depicted by the parade. The latter relates to the animal husbandry department. It tells about the "finest animals in one of the best college herds in the country that will parade before the public during the 1928 Farmers' Fair."
