Art Department Drops Serious Mien For Frivolous Christmas Tea Tuesday

The art department, perhaps the most informal division in the university, yet whose members are most serious of purpose, relaxed into one of its more playful moods at a Christmas party given in Mor-rill hall for the entire department Tuesday at 4 o'clock by Miss Kady B. Faulkner and Miss Louise Aus-

A Santa Claus (identity unknown) opened the festivities by distributing presents of various and sundry size and shape, all of which, when unwrapped, were discovered to be lollypops. His pack then produced a surprise to even the hostesses, a Christmas gift and stocking for each of the art faculty. Designed to reflect the taste or talent of the receiver (in a form more frivilous than valuable, though Mr. Kirsch drew a tiny camera that really works) the life painting class.

Misses Faulkner and Austin served tea, sandwiches, cookies and cake, thereby giving substance to the party and spoiling appetites for the evening meal.

As a fitting climax, four members of the department, by providing impomptu entertainment, also university. proved that their talent is not confined to only one field. Sally Green, garbed as the little five year old next door, sang a Christmas song with appropriate verses; Harold Hart, president of the Art ling successful, and how the total club, rendered one of those loosejointed tap dances he made famous in the Kosmet Klub show; and Bob Campbell and Marvin Bostrom gave their separate versions of terpischore on the piano.

"There will be more teas," Miss Faulkner announced, "one every month; but they will be minus the gifts were donated by the advanced presents and Santa, and will cost Jane Axtell. you five cents."

State Fails to Employ Its Trained Social Workers Says Dr. Williams

"While the university has been training social workers for the past twenty-five years, the majority of these persons have gone into other states to assist in solving social problems," declares Dr. Hattie Plum Williams, professor of sociology at the University of Ne-braska. "Yet Nebraska now more than ever before needs experts in the field of charity."

The theory of Dr. Amos G. Warner, prominent Nebraska alumnus and author of a classic on scientific charities has been used in the training of Nebraska people. This theory social science as well as other sciences should be based on a thoro knowledge of the underlying principles.

Nebraska Trained Workers.

Oustanding among the Nebraska trained workers is Gwendolyn Hughes Berry, director of the bureau of registration and statistics in the Association for Improving the Conditions of the Poor in New York City. Among other persons trained at Nebraska who are eng gaged in social work are:

Mildred McGraw, formerly of Broken Bow, is a worker in the public welfare department of Cook county, Chicago. Ruth Shallcross, late of Bellevue, is factory inspector for the New York state department of labor.

Mrs. Janet Schmidt Bergquist, formerly of Hastings, is the family visitor for the Chicago United Course at University.

The University of Nebraska is one of the few state universities which offers a basic course in social work for undergraduate students. This course may be elected in the freshman year when an efdoctors degree at the Library of train for that work in which they find themselves most fitted.

The Nebraska department at first worked under considerable handicap for lack of adequate laboratory training. When Dr. George E. Howard came to the university in 1912 he called to his staff Dr. Lucille Eaves, a former student under him at Leland Stanford, to give courses in training for social work. That was the beginning of the work in Nebraska and also in all state universities. Only two professional schools in the nation then offered such training.
