COMMITTEE RECEIVES ANSWERS TO BLANKET TAXING PLAN INQUIRY

The plan, nine report an increase; one reports that it has remained about the same; and the rest fail to reply on this aspect.

Tax Includes Activities.

Activities and organizations included in the distribution of the fee in all cases include athletics with the following sharing the proceeds in various schools: student paper, annual, humor magazine, dramatics, debate, band, class dues, musical organizations, stadium, alumni association, student union building fund, concert and lecture courses, student council expenses, honorary societies, glee club and intramural athletics.

Most schools using the plan, collect the fee as part of the registration fee at the beginning of each year, semester or quarter. Most grant exemptions for various reasons in a limited number of cases. The following schools reported they are now using the blanket tax plan:

- University of Washington, University of Utah, University of Florida, Delaware university, Oregon university, University of Michigan, Kansas State, Louisiana State university, University of Denver, Los Angeles, New York university, University of Wyoming, University of Southern California, University of Texas, Morningside college (Sioux City, Ia.), University of North Dakota, University of South Dakota, Syracuse, Columbia and one unidentified school.

The following schools do not use the tax plan, either because it has never been considered or because it has been investigated and thought undesirable:

- Yale, Harvard, University of Chicago, University of Iowa, University of Oklahoma, Purdue, Wisconsin, Princeton, Ohio State, University of Ohio and University of Pennsylvania.

Over fifty questionnaires were sent out, the committee reported, and additional replies are expected during the next few weeks. Decision as to what action the Nebraska Student council will take will be left to a vote of that body, Allaway said.

PORGY TICKET SALES INDICATE A SELLOUT

With Weather Breaks Hoff Predicts Full Houses All Performances.

"Ticket sales for the first nights of Porgy were unusually good," stated Charles Hoff, business manager of the University Players Tuesday night. "If we get any kind of a break on the weather, I can predict a complete sellout for the current play."

Altho some seats are vacant every night, this is largely due to those who had tickets and were unable to face the blizzard, according to Hoff. "Because of the great success this play has made in the first two nights, and the way it has been received we expect to clear our ticket files quite nicely." Ducats for the play during the remainder of the week can still be obtained at the window in the Temple building. Seats are 40 cents and the show starts at 7:30 o'clock.

SOCIAL CASE WORKER PRAISES NEW PLAY

thing beautiful out of primitive life, they are to be complimented. I see beauty in "Porgy," altho its portrayal is that of primitive life of a past decade. Its simplicity is cognizant of all negro plays, which must necessarily be simple because the negro family life is simple. Green Pastures is a play of this type."

Will Break Down Barriers.

"In the actual scenes I can see the emphasis upon the deep racial devotion. The one line, 'Porgy isn't here' shows that Porgy will break down barriers between races in Lincoln. This production could have only been made by the co-operation of both races, and the results show that they did co-operate."

"I noticed that this play started with a crap game," he continued, "that is as it should be. In Green Pastures, whose locale is Louisiana everything in the play builds up around a fish fry. In a setting of this sort, the lowest tenement district in Charleston, the main trait should be exposed. Surely in living conditions such as these, the results will be vice, corruption, crime and general sickness."

"Perhaps something may have been portrayed which some sensitive person may misconstrue, but that is only human nature," he concluded.

A student at Creighton found the bursar's office unable to cash a $20 bill he had in his possession. Silver stolen from the Stanford university dining room has been found in a dining hall in New England and China.

Education Costs Iowa State Students Less in 1933 Than in Any Other Year

AMES, Iowa, Jan. 30.—Education at Iowa State college is costing students less in 1933 than at any time in years.

Figures just compiled by college officials show that a student's "necessary expenses" in his first year may be as low as $269, and that a maximum figure is $440 for these same expenses—matriculation and registration fees, breakage deposit, books and supplies, board and room and gymnasium suit. And these figures are lower for the more advanced students, for matriculation and breakage fees need be paid only once by any student.

For the student not a resident of Iowa, $40 a year tuition must be added to the basic cost.

The lowered cost this year is largely the result of reductions in board and room prices in dormitories, college eating places, rooming houses, fraternity and sorority houses and restaurants. Board and room last year was figured at from $7.50 to $9.50 a week. This year the figures are $5 to $9.25.

Other reductions have been made, however, both in "necessary expenses" and in expenses purely optional with the individual student. Book stores report that more second hand texts are being bought than at any time in years. Amusement prices are lower—widely attended dances in Memorial Union are being held this year at "10 cents a head." College athletic events cost less, even movie prices are down. And clothing prices have fallen considerably. So some students are attending Iowa State this year for as little as $325, and a considerable number for about $500. And with decreased costs have come better grades and a "more earnest attitude," college officials say. The college was obliged to drop only 27 students for scholastic deficiencies at the end of last quarter, as compared with 108 at the same time a year ago.
