Notice.

We have decided to increase the subscription price of The Nebraskan to one dollar next year. Our readers will be benefited by this as much as ourselves. During the last two months of the year it is almost impossible to keep up the standard we start in the fall. We think this will be obviated by the slight increase in price. To be absolutely fair, however, anyone may have The Nebraskan next year at 75 cents by subscribing and paying for it before June 10. The price by mail will hereafter be $1.00.

Everyone can do his duty during the summer by rehearsing the needs of the university to prospective members of the legislature from his district. We are just as much in need of money now as we were two years ago.

The present senior class has broken the old time custom in more than one way. This time, through the order of the chancellor, they are excused from attending classes while preparing and training for the class day exercises. Although the privilege has never been heretofore granted, it is a departure which is commendable. Every member of the class rejoices in the recognition that the exercises are receiving and in the hearty co-operation of the university authorities to make them a fitting memento of the class' college career. To prepare and render a play creditably is no slight task, and it is only a timely recognition of the work each member of the class has done in their college course, to lighten their labors as the day of graduation draws nigh. Much is gained by this departure. Do not keep the seniors grinding up to the last moment. Let us keep their good will and enable them in every possible way to show their capabilities in the class day exercises.

The Nebraskan believes that a fitting remark may be made at this time upon the prospects for the university in the next session of the state legislature. This is certainly an all-important matter. It is too early, of course, to say just what the legislature will do for us. That it will act conscientiously no one doubts. That it will feel due responsibility for the successful work of the institution cannot be questioned. Then it behooves us to see that every candidate for the legislature is fully informed as to our needs and of the vigorous and healthy man and womanhood which is here being developed.

Never in the history of the university has the result of legislation in regard to it been of as vital importance as at present. The marvellous growth of the institution has placed it where it is unable to stop or to recede. The increase in the number of students, the higher and more efficient educational methods of teaching, the splendid laboratory facilities, and the advantages of a large and well selected library, all attest the wonderful advance and the splendid possibilities in store for the university.

Every citizen of the state, and especially the coming members of the legislature, should know the value of educational training. Everything that can be done must be done to make them familiar with even the details of the workings of the several departments. Then what is plainly the duty of the loyal student? It is evidently to let every candidate understand the exact status of affairs in this institution. Do not go home and think only of enjoyment and of the next year's work. But tell your parents, your neighbors, and most of all, tell your prospective legislators, of the "pride" the university is to the state, of the important work it is doing and what is necessary to increase its prestige. The visitors' register will show names of persons who come from all parts of the state to see what is being done. All are satisfied and pleased at the results and proud of the institution they aid in supporting. With their co-operation, the students, while at home, may wield a mighty influence, not only upon the legislators, but for higher education. When the people are aroused to the importance of university work, we will not have to pass through "trials and tribulations" every two years in order to get sufficient revenue. Let us seek to spread that honored, timely and immortal saying of our ex-Chancellor Canfield. "It is not that the university wants numbers, but numbers want the university." With that truth as our watchword, we must triumph, and the university will march onward and upward in the great cause of higher education.

We are confident that the university will receive a liberal appropriation from the legislature next year. There is no reason why it should not, there is every reason why it should. It is a simple fact that the revenues of the university are not sufficient for its maintenance and normal growth. The total enrollment this year is over twelve hundred. True, abolishing the preparatory departments may decrease the number slightly, but not materially. The advance in higher education, the necessity for the most efficient instructors and provision for the best educational advantages require revenue, and so far the appropriations have fallen below the demand for a healthy and needed improvement in college and post-graduate work. To hinder a normal growth of the many departments for the sake of funds is purely educational suicide. The instructional force must be kept up. The hundreds of young men and women who are ready for college work should be accommodated with the best of facilities. No taxpayer in Nebraska will ever regret the mite he spends to aid the freest and fullest development of a typical university. Give us ample room, good laboratory and library facilities, the most efficient and competent instructors and we will send forth into the world young men and women who will be a pride to their parents and an honor to their state.

WHAT THEY SAY.

"I will now give you a correct imitation of a duck," said the fair maid, as she ran from the main building to the library in the rain.

"This may not be strictly truthful," said Eddie Adams, as he told a freshman from Jaytown that there were to be five quadrilles and a Virginia reel on the program for the senior Prom., "but it is certainly a stroke of business," and he sold him a ticket for $2.50.

"The day for hero worship is over," sighed Ralph Haggard. "Why, the other night I risked life and limb and Bob Uhle's anger and scaled a wall twenty-five feet high and yet I haven't been presented with a medal or anything that could answer to that description.

"Yes," said Phil Russell, dreamily. "I enjoyed Carl Tucker's musicale very much. I didn't like Carl's part of it very well, and I never can enjoy instrumental music, but parts of the program struck me as being mighty fine."

PERSONAL.

NOTICE—I will give an exhibition of scientific ladder climbing for all those who seriously contemplate taking up this branch of work next year.

TOM MAPES.

RECEIPT—I have an original receipt for hair varnish which I will import for a small consideration to those wishing for such an article.

PHIL RUSSEL.

AUCTION SALE—I have a standard array of threadbare jokes and puns that I will auction off. I can vouch for their stability, as I have given them all many personal tests for the last three years.

GEORGE B.

NOTICE—I will take pupils for private instruction in the five-step. As I myself am unusually successful in this dance (having accomplished everything but the step and the time) I feel that I am competent as an instructor.
