The prowess of Missouri has asserted itself. Their victories in debates over Kansas University and our debaters shows us that in Missouri we have a foe worthy of our steel. Heretofore in football she has fallen to our fellows but now the reversal has arrived. We can do nought else but congratulate Missouri. Evidently the combination of athletics and oratory has proven a happy one. It remains for us to defeat Kansas and even up an old score.

The war fever seems to be on in earnest among the students. It is currently reported that something like 100 have left their work to enlist. These together with the students who expect to go with the heavy artillery will give the University a good representation. A Col. Finston a Kansas Phi, who has been a colonel in the Cuban army, is reported to be raising a regiment largely among students and alumni of Kansas University. Two companies have been formed directly from the student body at Kansas. From authentic reports it would seem that the probability of these volunteers even moving outside of the state is very small indeed.

We have purchased a ticket for the debate, in fact we purchased two, and now of course we expect to attend and hear our men do up the enemy. Personally we would rather that Nebraska would out-debate Kansas than any other University. Kansas is our enemy and has been of yore and since our ball team failed to down them we are especially anxious that Nebraska win the debate.

The personnel of our debating team is good—the question fair, and with a Lincoln audience we ought to win. We hope no one will accuse us of not attending this debate for we really intend to do so at present writing. It is our turn to win the Kansas-Nebraska debate and of course we shall whether or no. Our debaters are good fellows. Three cheers for them.

We happened to spy Deacon Kindler in a certain Kansas town last Monday. "Deacon" was on his way to Lawrence to play ball with our boys and from there he is going to Columbia for the Missouri-Nebraska debate. It did us good to shake the "Deacon's" hand and to feel that one was shaking hands with such a good, wholesouled honest fellow, one who has done much for his fellow students, much for his University and a great deal for himself. It is not one bit flattery to say that what there is of good in baseball in Nebraska came there aided by the work and influence of Kindler. The so-called "coming around" of the ball boys was not a condescension on their part but rather an acknowledgment of his work for the cause. Kindler is an example of an all-round University man. He won a place for himself on the debate against odds and that place was the highest. He has kept up his school work and during the first semester was president of the senior class. He certainly merits the admiration which he receives from his classmates and fellow-students.

BLIND LEADS BLIND.

The rather unusual spectacle of the blind leading the blind attracted considerable attention on the campus the other morning. There are two blind students in the literary department this semester. One is J. P. Hamilton, the blind piano tuner, who also ranks as one of the best wrestlers in the University, the other is a gentleman named Russell, who entered from Detroit the second semester. Mr. Hamilton has been here for two years and is well acquainted with the campus and all the buildings, while Mr. Russell has yet to learn many things in regard to the location of the various buildings.

The two men happen to have several of the same classes, and it is a common sight to see Mr. Hamilton guiding his friend from building to building and from class room to class room. Mr. Hamilton uses his cane with amazing skill as he swiftly picks his way along the crowded walks, and the two blind men manage to get around almost as quickly as those who are blessed with unimpaired sight.—U. of N. Daily.
