

THE NEBRASKAN.

A Weekly Newspaper Issued Every Friday Noon, by the Students of the University of Nebraska.

Entered as Second Class Mail Matter. Geo. L. Towne, . . . . . Managing Editor

The Nebraskan will be sent to any address upon receipt of the subscription price, which is one dollar a year.

Contributions are solicited from all. News items such as locals, personals, reports of meetings, etc., are especially desired. The Nebraskan will be glad to print any contribution relative to a general university subject, but the name must accompany all such.

Address all communications to the Nebraskan, University of Nebraska.

Do not register for too much work.

If you do, you will regret it later in the year.

Then you will be in a dilemma. You will not want to slight any study, of course, and you can not do so much well.

You will not want to drop any study, for if you do you will hurt some professor's feelings, or, perhaps, you will make him think you neckie.

Remember, too, that every student needs some time for bench work. Although the university is principally a place for study, a most severe kind of work, yet it is also a place where there are galloped large numbers of young men and women, with whom every student can and ought to associate; for his own good especially and for the good of others incidentally.

And then every student needs time to be interested in athletics. If you can play foot ball, it is good exercise; try for the team. If you don't play foot ball there is base ball and tennis and track work, some of which you ought to interest yourself in and help to make a record for the university.

You ought to save time, also, for literary work, and for some general reading. You will want to belong to some of the clubs, probably, and you will want to read the college papers, the newspapers and the magazines.

All of these take a little time, not much, but you need to think of them when you make out your card for Miss Smith.

And still the university continues to grow. This year the new cooking department will be put in operation with Miss Rosa Bouton at the head. This is a commendable step in advance. Manual training for boys and scientific cooking for girls are two things which the patrons of the schools are demanding all over the country, and the value of which the advanced thinkers among educators now recognize. It is right that the university should lead, in due time the high schools will follow.

Kansas has had a cooking and sewing department in connection with the agricultural school at Manhattan for several years. It has a very high standing among such schools all over the country, and many of its graduates have good positions in similar institutions both east and west. With the special facilities at the command of the department here and its commodious quarters in the new mechanical arts building, there is every reason to believe that the very best of work will be accomplished.

The Nebraskan passes into the hands of a new management with this issue. However, its policy will not be changed and its traditions will be carefully preserved. The Nebraskan has made a record in the past of which it has every reason to be proud, and the new management is glad to take advantage of this opportunity to congratulate those in charge heretofore.

Mr. H. G. Whitmore was the founder of the paper away back in 1892, when Omaceator Canfield was at the head of affairs at the university; and, during the years of its infancy, he struggled hard, but successfully, to raise it to a high place among college journals. His successor, Mr. F. T. Riley, became its editor in 1894 and the success of the paper since that time has been almost entirely due to his efforts. He has made of the Nebraskan a thoroughly live university newspaper, which has been commended by every one for the lofty tone of its editorials, and the completeness and promptness with which it has given the news.

Mr. A. E. Fairlee had charge during a part of the last school year and showed clearly enough, during that short time, his ability as a manager and editor. Spain, however, took his attention early in the summer, and, as a consequence, he is still engaged at Fort Omaha.

In the future the Nebraskan will appear every Friday just as it always has in the past. It will continue to be essentially a newspaper and all events of interest to the University or its students will be chronicled while they are still interesting. Its editorial policy will be conservative, not sparing criticism, however, when criticism is manifestly due. Yet it will criticize no one and nothing without most careful consideration.

Firstly the Nebraskan will represent all the university and all its varied interests. The organ of no clique, the mouthpiece of no faction, it will survive all its times to be in reality, what it claims to be, a thoroughly representative university paper.

The Youth's Companion gives a page in its issue for the week of September 25th, to the Trans-Mississippi and International Exposition at Omaha. The descriptive article is accompanied by a fine photo-engraving, four columns wide, presenting a general view of the Grand Canal Court, exhibition grounds and buildings. The Companion believes that these great industrial exhibitions not only promote the prosperity of the people, but stimulate their patriotism. Every visitor to the Omaha exhibition must marvel at the vast resources west of the Mississippi, and feel a glow of pride in realizing that the great west is but a part of the glorious country that smiles under the stars and stripes.

The Northwestern Monthly, which for years has been the leading educational paper in the west, comes forth this year as a journal devoted exclusively to "University extension and educational problems within and without the school." This is a long step in advance and one which indicates that the Northwestern Monthly has reached a higher and broader plane. There are several excellent articles in the September number by university men. Professors Fung, Caldwell and Jones write upon history subjects; Prof. Taylor gives the gist of a series of articles upon political economy; Prof. Luckey edits a department of child study; and Professors Sherman and Amsy discuss literature and English.

Miss Mabel Tuttle, the former executive clerk at the university, was presented on June 11th, with a handsome set of Russian's complete works in twenty-six volumes, together with Washington Irving's "Conquest of Granada," in two volumes. These gifts were given her by the students of the university as a sign of their high appreciation and respect for her while she served the university. Miss Tuttle was always known as the students' friend, and all who knew her knew her as such. Her humane and generous interest in every student's welfare made her a true and confidential friend to all. She will ever be remembered by her many kind favors and her sincere loyalty and devotion to the students' interests. The books were purchased by the money raised by subscription lists which were circulated generally among the students the latter part of last year, each subscription being ten cents, thus making it a popular gift. Several hundred names were signed to the lists. The covers of the book bear the inscription in gold letters: "Miss Mabel Tuttle, Presented by the Students of the University of Nebraska."

The registration of new students Thursday night was as follows: Students in regular courses . . . . . 160 Unclassed students . . . . . 29 Technical students . . . . . 27 Special students . . . . . 9 Preparatory students . . . . . 4 Making a total of 229 new students, which is a larger enrollment than ever before in the history of the university for the first three days of registration.

Westerfield, the barber, is an artist in his line and will make every effort to please his student friends, at the tonsorial parlors on north 13th St.

Mr. Jesse Yont, an old time football player, is watching the new students register. He is now practicing law in Denver.

THE OUTLOOK FOR FOOTBALL.

on the 18th. As far as can be learned the following men of last year's team will be back: Melford, Cowgill, Stringer, Hansen, Schwartz, Benedict and Williams. Pearse is very sick with typhoid fever at Fort Crook hospital and will not be back. Captain Shedd will not be in school. Hayward will be back in two weeks and will likely play on the team.

Active work on the grid iron will begin immediately. For a week the coach will get the men in condition by running, punting and plenty of good baths. Hard training will commence about the 25th. The grand stand on the west side will be improved and extended the whole length of the field.

Manager Bischof has arranged for at least four good games on the home grounds and hopes to put the athletic association on a more solid foundation if the patronage equals that of last year. Barnard college in New York city, in 1900.
