Professor Fossler and H. G. Shedd have been soliciting subscriptions for the alumni organ from those old students of the University who have been attending the State Teachers' Association. They have met with good success, having secured pledges for several hundred dollars. The organ is now being packed in Omaha and it is expected will be shipped early in January over the Burlington, the officials of which roads have very kindly consented to transport it free of cost.

A new addition to the University library, something in the nature of a departmental library, is the new chancellor's library, which is being formed in his office. This consists of all of the University publications of past years, catalogues and publications of other leading universities, books, pamphlets and publications by the professors and instructors and graduates of the University of Nebraska. It will be unique of its kind, and also a library of constant reference to the University faculty.

The winter course in agriculture, commonly known as the short term in agriculture, which begins January 3d, promises to have a very large attendance of students who find themselves unable to leave the farm except at this time of the year. This course is designed to meet the demand for a simple and practical instruction in agriculture, and includes work in soils, field crops, diseases of farm animals, breeding of live stock, dairying, horticulture, agricultural engineering, carpentry, blacksmithing, insects injurious to crops, plant pests, farm accounts and English.

The University museum has received from the United States fish commission a large collection of deep-sea fishes which were obtained from the commission through the efforts of H. B. Ward while he was associated with them during the summer. There are included some very rare forms from considerable depths which could hardly be duplicated outside of the National Museum at Washington.

The department has recently received a set of brain models from Germany which represent the structure of the brain in different groups of vertebrates, from the simplest type, in fishes, to the highest development, in man. There have also been added a number of new wall charts and an assortment of staining jars and other glassware.

Call and see our new stock of electric fixtures.

THE GRADUATE CLUB.

The Graduate Club of the University held its first meeting of the year Saturday evening, December 17th in Paladian hall. Early in the week the announcements of the meeting were sent to the graduate students and the faculty. In response about thirty "grads," gather for an evening together. In view of the fact that few of the graduate students knew "who's who" in the other departments the young ladies in charge of the entertainment devised a neat scheme of tagging; each person was tagged with a card bearing his name and a subject usually suggesting the department represented, a subject which he was not to talk about during the evening. Thus for Dean Edgren the beloved subject of "Choctaw" was tabooed, for Miss Whiting, "Effects," for Miss Henry, "Gray Matter," for Miss Heppner, "Principal parts," for Professor Fossler, "The Teuton vs. the world." A pleasant hour was spent in avoiding these topics. The program following was short and interesting. Mr. S. R. Cook, fellow in Physics, spoke briefly on "Liquefaction of Hydrogen," a subject of much interest among scientists at the present time. Miss Bertha Pinkerton of the American History department, read a paper on "Lincoln and His Cabinet." Professor Ward spoke informally of some very interesting experiments now being performed by zoologists. Following this was a brief symposium or experience meeting relating to the conduct of graduate clubs in other institutions. Mrs. Hinman and Professor Franklin were unable to be present, but both sent papers which were read by Miss Henry and Mr. Piper, respectively. Mrs. Hinman told of the club work at Cornell, and Professor Franklin related the success of the Chicago University club. Dr. Ward spoke briefly of the Harvard club. Miss Flora Bullock, secretary of the University of Nebraska club, then gave the closing exhortation as to the future of the club in Nebraska University. The present officers have adopted the policy followed by other similar clubs, as shown in the brief accounts read, of making the meetings social, more than scholastic. After this feast of reason the gathering was turned over to Miss Whiting who came in from "the kitchen" with tempting refreshments. This part of the program, as well as that preceding, met with the approval of all present. Two more meetings will be held this year, one in March and one in May. The officers are endeavoring to make the meetings enjoyable and profitable. Membership in the club is free to all graduate students of the University. It is their privilege, however, to pay an annual fee of twenty-five cents for the defraying of necessary expenses.
