

M. J. Shaffer, who spent sometime in the natural science departments a few years ago, is now teaching in the Union high school.

Miss West, whom we'll remember as Miss Ducker's inseperable, was in Lincoln during the association. She is teaching in Minden.

Miss Green who was posting last year in the classical department has a position in the Omaha high school.

C. R. Weldon was in Lincoln during the holidays. He made good use of the Wyuka cemetery street car ticket given him last class day.

Harvey Heald was in Lincoln during the teachers' association. He seemed to be devoting his attention to a private class of one.

Strafford Hewitt has gone with his father to Columbus, O. Rev. Hewitt has been called to preach in the Grace church in that city. Chap, no doubt, is sorry to leave the Uni. but to go to Chancellor Canfield's school will make things less lonesome.

There were a host of alumni and former students in Lincoln during the holidays. Most of them to be sure were pedagogues attending the Teachers Association. Among the number we noticed Professor Skinner, Allen Fling and Harry Barber, of Nebraska City; Frank Brown, of Kearney, Dave Crabtree, of Chappell; George Town, who is teaching in Humboldt; Miss Grace Bridges, of David City; Miss Barks, of Beatrice; E. B. Sherman, who is teaching in Fairfield; Lulu Green, Ashland; G. I. Babcock, Palmyra; S. H. Martin, DeWitt; Stella Ducker, Minden; W. Kirk, Edgar; Schuyler Miller, Schuyler. All of these are University alumni. Also L. L. Funke of Pickeral. Mr. Funke expects to enter school soon and graduate with the '96 law class.

Frey & Frey, corner 12th and O streets, Funke opera house block. Choice roses, carnations and all flowers in season; lowest prices. Decorations and funeral designs filled on short notice. Give us a call.

The Delian Removal.

Ever since its organization the Delian society has held its meetings in the chapel. This has been the greatest obstacle in the way of its growth and success. The stationary seats an impediment to the social part of the meetings and the size of the room standing in the way of the literary part, it was difficult to get either new members or visitors. For this reason the society has not always had large audiences, and within the last year, some of its members hopeless of ever getting a hall adapted to society work, have resigned.

Yet to say that the society has not been successful from the first is to be far from the truth. For the very struggle under such discouraging circumstances for existence and recognition in the University furnished the best kind of training for its members. So that it numbers among its alumni some of the best men and women yet graduated from the University. The fact that the Delians have lived and prospered under surroundings that have witnessed the deaths of two less distinctively literary organizations, testifies to the determination of those who make up the membership of the open societies.

During the changes incident to the completion of the new library building, the Delians obtained from the room committee of the faculty permission to fit up room 11 of the old library for society purposes. They took possession of this new hall Friday evening, January 10th. To give more dignity to the occasion the exercises were conducted by alumni.

The house was called to order by President Mary Horne who introduced E. R. Holmes as the presiding officer for the evening. (Mr. Holmes was chairman of the meeting that organized the society in 1889.) He opened the program with an historical sketch of the Delians which recounted the events leading up to their organization. The paper was ably prepared and formed a valuable bit of contemporaneous history as it gives the whereabouts and occupations of the charter members.
