The Palladian annual summer picnic took place at Lincoln Park on the afternoon and evening of August 27th. About thirty were in attendance. The latent store of Palladian good humor, which had been accumulating during the summer, was all let loose, and a royal good time was the result. The principal feature of the occasion was the splendid picnic supper, which was spread out and arranged under the watchful supervision of Miss Bullock. It is very evident that the Lincoln members of the society were in great need of just such a feed. Nearly three gallons of ice cream, an average of over a pint of cream apiece, was consumed, besides all the other luxuries with which the tables were spread. About ten o'clock, after all the Palladian fun had been exhausted, and the fire works had gone out, all departed feeling jubilant over a successful Pall. picnic.
