THE WAY CLAUDE DOES IT.

When Claude Wilson's moon-eyes sparkles,
And he does a rainbow smile,
When his ears are pricked for business
And his looks his thoughts beguile;
When he slaps you on the shoulder
More familiarly each day
Why, just smile it all off blandly
For 'tis Wilson's natural way.

FRESHMAN'S REGISTRATION REVERIE.

I was speaking with her kindly
When she answered with a frown

And with a bang she shut the door
Of her displeasure down.

I respect gray hairs and wrinkles
When they do not vent their spleen,
But I'd rather not be eaten
While I'm so eternal green.

HIC JACET—A FORECAST.

I.

Pull out the stops, press down the keys
And make the bellows sigh
And make our new pipe-organ wheeze
A giant lullaby
To lull to sleep, to put to rest,
The roaring blizzard from the west!

II.

Push in the stops, press light the keys!
The bellows gently urge!
Breathe forth Death's saddest harmonies
In lowly funeral dirge,
To quiet in death—with forecast wise
The weather man; for still he lies.
