

BIXBY'S RETREAT.

ICICLES FROM THE LIBRARY.

Such a buzzing in the air,
Such a roaring everywhere,
Do not try to study there,
In Fratdom.

Take your traps and flee away,
In the polar regions stay,
Where the brooks freeze at mid-day,
Not in Fratdom.

Do they ever study there—
All those girls with touseled hair,
Who would lure you to their lair,
In Fratdom?

Oh, the chatter, chaiter so,
Till I think that I will go
To the land where magpies grow,
Out of Fratdom.

And I grieve to see those boys—
Fathers' treasures, mothers' joys—
Spēnd their time in making noise
In Fratdom.

Now, if I were Mr. Wyer,
Four policemen would I hire,
And there'd be some doing dire,
In Fratdom.

I raise my voice and my song is glad,
The Powers that Be I extol
For I know by the feel in the library "frig,"
They've purchased a load of coal.

* Zero down in Washington,
Two score below at Butte,
Freezing up at New Orleans;
Things between to suit.

But I know the coldest place
Known to man alive;
No small Fahrenheit I need—
'Twould bust at sixty-five.

Seems to me that I will go
To tune my golden lyre,
Every morning when I rise
To dress without a fire.

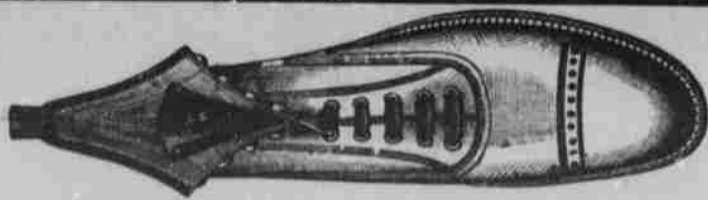

* Left over from last week.
