OLDEN TIME FOOTBALL.

In the year 1583 a Puritan, named Philip Stobbes, published a book in which he describes football as then played in a manner which is to us both quaint and amusing, but which shows the game in its practices and consequences to have been unchanged by the passing of over 300 years. Master Stubbes thus discourseth:

"Now who is so grossly blind that seeth not that these aforesaid exercises not only doe withdraw us from godliness and virtue, but also haile and allure us to wickedness and sin? For as concerning football playing I protest unto you that it may rather be called frierdlie kind of fygtthe than a play or recreation—a bloody and murdering practice than a felowly sport or pastime. For dooth not every one lye in waight for his adversarie, seeking to overthrowe him and picke him on his nose, though it be upon hard stones, in ditch or dale, in valley or hill, or whatever place soever it be hee careth not, so hee have him downe; and he that can serve the most of this fashion he is counted the only fellow, and who but he? * * * So that by this means sometimes their necks are broken, somet'imes their backs, sometimes their legs, sometimes their arms, sometimes their noses gush out with blood, sometimes their eyes start out, and sometimes hurte in one place, sometimes in another. But whosoever scapeih away the best goeth not scot free, but is either forewounded, craised, or bruised, so as he dyeth of it or else scapeth very hardlie; and no marvaile, for they have the sleights to meet one betwixt two, to dash him against the hart with their elbows, to hit him under the short ribs with their griped fists and with their knees to catch him on the hip and pick him on his neck, with a hundred such murthring devices."—K.
